Makes Apology to Historian Muzzey.

Former Congressman John J. Gorman, in a public apology yesterday to Dr. David Saville Muzzey, Columbia university historian, repudiated his charges that Dr. Muzzey's school textbooks contained British propaganda, designed to betray America and bring this nation again under the rule of King George of England.

JOHN J. GORMAN.

Gorman made his charges as evidence in the school board trial of William McAndrew, former superintendent of Chicago schools. Gorman acted as prosecutor in chief of the case against Supt. McAndrew, and his attack on the Muzzey texts, then used in the schools, was one of the main props in the evidence which resulted in the ouster of Supt. McAndrew on March 21, 1928.

Gorman Holds the Sack.

Gorman had been appointed by Mayor Thompson to engineer the ouster of McAndrew as a part of the mayor's preElection pledge to "bust King George in the snoot." It was reported yesterday that Gorman had been left "holding the sack" by the city hall after he had accomplished his mission against Mr. McAndrew. Gorman now says he never wrote the attack on Muzzey at all, but that it was written by some one else—evidently retained by Thompson's campaign headquarters.

Gorman's apology and retraction came in the form of a letter to Dr. Muzzey and it was made a part of the public record of the historian's $100,000 libel suit against the former congressman. The suit, started in the United States District court here, was dropped by Dr. Muzzey on Gorman's retraction. It was dismissed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, upon agreement of Attorney Stephen A. Foster, representing Dr. Muzzey, and Attorney Jacob E. Bittus, counsel for Gorman.

Vindication for McAndrew.

Although directed to Dr. Muzzey alone, the letter was regarded as a vindication of Mr. McAndrew, marking the collapse of the pro King George accusations brought by the Thompson school board to obtain McAndrew's dismissal. The testimony that Gorman gave at the McAndrew trial and a letter to Mayor Thompson in which he made identical statements formed the basis for Dr. Muzzey's suit.

Attorney Foster said that Gorman's letter of apology to Dr. Muzzey was probably as complete a retraction as any ever made in a libel matter. The letter follows:

"I write to retract the charges I made concerning your textbooks in use in the public schools. As you have already been advised, the letter which I addressed to Mayor Thompson, dated Aug. 24, 1927, criticizing your textbook, 'American History,' was not written by me but was prepared entirely by another person.

Hadn't Read the Book.

"I had not at the time read your book to which this letter referred, and I made the mistake of signing it because of the confidence I had in that person and his statements. I have since found that I was misled in so doing.

"I greatly regret if, in this letter to the mayor, in my testimony at the McAndrew trial before the board of education, or in any other statement made by me, I have seemed to reflect in any way upon your motives for writing these textbooks or upon your character as a patriotic citizen, for I now realize that I had no basis for casting such aspersions.

"A careful study of your textbooks discloses nothing which I could criticise and I consider the books well adapted to the use in the public schools.

"You are at liberty to make this letter public and to use it in any way that you may see fit so as to remove so far as possible any wrong impression that may have gone abroad from anything that I have said or done."

Gorman was reported to have left for Crystal Lake immediately after signing the letter. His attorney, Mr. Bittus, confirmed reports that he

Bush Pitches Cubs to 3-1 Victory

M'CARTHY PINS HOPES OF TYING SERIES ON ROOT

Chicago Sluggers Hit in Pinches.

The fourth game of the world series between the Athletics and the Cubs will be played this afternoon in Philadelphia starting at 12:30 Chicago time. The weather is predicted as cloudy and warmer, followed by rain at night. Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs is expected to send Charley Root against the Athletics in an effort to even the series. Grove or Walberg is expected to be Connie Mack's pitching choice.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—The Cubs came back today. They hit when a blunder gave them a break, and Guy Bush, a target in the waning days of the regular season, pitched one of his finest games. No more was needed.

The hits in the pinch and the pitching literally flattened the Athletics in the third battle of the world series to give the National league champions their first victory. The score was 3 to 1.

As Bush, the Mississippian with the funny sideburns, went into the ascendancy, George Earnshaw went down. George had had his fling in Chicago and the Cubs knocked him away. Mack sent him back unexpectedly today. It was sort of an indication he has no faith in his other hurlers. George pitched for a while—pitched beautifully—but when Dykes sprawled all over a grounder just after a pass in the sixth everything changed.

Fate would have it that the strikeout goats of the series should cause the change. They were Rogers Hornsby and Kiki Cuyler.

Bush Stops Sluggers.

Bush threw like a man who knew how and wasn't afraid to make the attempt. Behind it all is the sad story. The Cubs had been divided on the problem of pitching to Simmons and Foxx, the two headliners in the American league attack. Pitching inside to them had proved a failure. Today they switched to the outside corners. Bush couldn't have done it better had he been a machine. He was always on the outside edge of the plate to them with a curve, except for an occasional fast ball, used merely to keep them guessing. When you stop this pair you take the core from Mack's offense. Bush curved them into complete silence.

There was another thing aside from Bush's hurling to Simmons and Foxx that made him great. He was hit freely in the early innings and was always in trouble. This merely made him work harder. In the first four chapters there were five Mack hits, another error by jumpy Woody English, and a pass. Out of all these openings the American leaguers drew nothing except unenviable credit for having a large number of runners left on bases. Bush outguessed them in every pinch. He laughed whenever he climbed out of one of these holes. He actually enjoyed himself.

Bush Starts Rally.

Bush's first bad rap and his only one came in the fifth. There was a scratch hit by Cochrane for a starter. Before the round ended Bing Miller came through with a blow. A run grew from this, but the Cubs didn't fold up. It was only a few more minutes before they showed they weren't down.

Bush started this victorious session by refusing to take his bat off his shoulder until Earnshaw had walked him. Then the error by Dykes and the two hits. Hornsby's hit came after he had fanned twice; Cuyler's after Earnshaw had fanned him once.

Once in the lead the Cubs were a different ball club. They had pep and lots to say. What's more, Bush's arm still had more pitching to display before the Macks. He dropped 'em three in a row in the sixth.

In the seventh he turned in his most masterful bit when he halted Simmons and Foxx with two men on the bases as the result of a single and a pass. After this he refused to get into any kind of trouble. Only three of them faced him in the eighth. It was the same in the ninth, including a pinch hitter whom he fanned on a sweeping curve.

If the Macks need consolation for losing the first series game to the

'WE'RE STILL WITH YOU; GO AHEAD AND WIN SERIES!' FANS WIRE CUBS

Pop Dearborn's hope of a world series victory flames anew. Fans responded to the Cubs' triumph over the Athletics yesterday with a rush of congratulatory telegrams.

Western Union officials last night reported that 500 messages had been sent to Manager McCarthy, 75 to Hack Wilson, and 50 to Guy Bush.

Twenty-five Chicagoans wired Elwood English to forget those four errors he has made since the series opened here last Tuesday. They assured him he still is the greatest shortstop in the major leagues.

2 MORE BOMBS, 101 AND 102, SET POLICE GUESSING

Bomb No. 101 of the 1929 Cook county series burst at 9 o'clock last night beside a private garage in the rear of a three apartment building at 6838 Oglesby avenue. An hour later the 102d county bomb—and the fourth in Evanston's history—exploded in a three story apartment under construction at 606 Sheridan road in the suburb.

The earlier blast was audible at the residence of State's Attorney Swanson, a few blocks away at 7217 Crandon avenue, which was bombed on March 26, 1928. The damage last night was slight.

The first floor tenant, Alfred S. Trude Jr., nephew of Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude, and the second floor tenant, Milton Fellchenfeld, partner in a chain of south side meat markets, were both mystified. The top floor tenant is Edward Qualkinbush, a real estate dealer at 3349 West 79th street, and owner of the apartment.

It took Evanston police twenty minutes to discover the location of the blast in the uncompleted apartment building. As in three previous bombings in the last three months, they attributed it to a crank. The damage was negligible.

COLLECTOR GETS $50,000 FOR HIS STAMP HOBBY

Fred S. Raff, a bachelor and accountant of 6231 Greenwood avenue, has just given up his lifelong hobby for a $50,000 consideration.

Thirty years ago Raff began buying precanceled stamps, first by the bagful and later by the ton. He spent his spare hours sorting the millions of stamps to find rare specimens that collectors might covet.

He spent about $10,000 for bulk stamps. A few weeks ago he found a dealer, Adolph Gunesch, 9719 Prairie avenue, who estimated his collection to be worth $50,000 and agreed to buy at that figure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Albert B. Fall, suffering from bronchial pneumonia and in defiance of physicians' predictions of dire results, was wheeled into court in a chair this afternoon so that his trial for accepting a $100,000 bribe from E. L. Doheny, multi-millionaire oil magnate, could proceed.

Justice William Hitz, moved by the eloquent insistence of Frank J. Hogan, chief defense counsel, that, in spite of the warnings of four doctors, the aged and broken ex-cabinet member is entitled to "vindication before he passes into the great beyond," reluctantly denied a government motion to declare a mistrial and ordered the jury recalled to the box.

Hogan Takes Responsibility.

Sole responsibility for subjecting his client to "a trial by ordeal" when the government was willing and anxious for a postponement pending Fall's recovery, was placed upon Hogan by the court and a moment later the former secretary of the interior's son-in-law, C. C. Chase of El Paso, Tex., was on the stand.

Fall's appearance this afternoon for the first time since he collapsed in the courtroom Tuesday was one of the most dramatic incidents of the many sensations which have marked the oil scandals investigation and litigation. Atlee Pomerene, former senator from Ohio, associated with Owen J. Roberts as special government counsel, was in the midst of his plea to the court that to continue the trial would be an injustice to the government, as well as to Fall.

Without previous warning a door at the right of the bench suddenly opened and Fall, a truly tragic figure, his face a ghastly white and his body wrapped to the neck in blankets, automobile rugs, and mufflers, was wheeled in and to his deep-cushioned chair at the bar. A courthouse attaché had been pressed into service to push the chair, which was flanked on one side by Dr. H. C. Safford, Fall's personal physician, and on the other by the trained nurse who has been in constant attendance.

It was a tense moment as Senator Pomerene paused in his argument to the court and turned to see Dr. Safford, the nurse, and Houston Fall, a nephew of the stricken man, lift Fall to his feet with great difficulty, and having taken the blankets and mufflers away, ease him slowly down into the Morris chair. Mrs. Fall, Fall's two daughters, Mrs. C. C. Chase and Mrs. Jouett Elliott, and Doheny took places among the spectators.

"It has been said," Senator Pomerene resumed, "that this has become a trial by ordeal. We have never seen such unanimity among physicians as to the present condition of the defendant and the probable outcome if we proceed. The special counsel representing the government feels it would be doing an injustice to the government as well as to the defendant if they insisted on going on with the trial if the results are likely to be grave."

"As an officer of the court and attorney for Mr. Fall, you say you are ready to proceed with the trial of this case?" asked Justice Hitz, addressing Hogan.

"I do," answered Hogan.

Walter Knippenberg, 3323 Monroe avenue, Bellwood, was being sought last night on a warrant charging him with stealing a haystack from Alphonse Volchaert, 1926 South 10th avenue, Maywood, a contractor. Volchaert charged that Knippenberg gave him the stack of hay in payment for excavating done for Knippenberg, and that after he had moved it to his farm, Knippenberg carted it away.

Gang Storms Inn; Leader Shot in Fight

Joseph Touhey, 35 years old, said to be a beer runner of Maywood, was wounded, probably fatally, last night in a gun battle with Victor Willert in Willert's roadhouse, the Windmill Tavern, at Irving Park boulevard and River road in Schiller Park. He was taken to the Westlake hospital in Melrose Park with a bullet in his chest just above the heart.

The battle started when Touhey and four companions broke into the roadhouse, threatening to take Willert for a ride, and ended with the flight of his pals after Touhey had been shot down. More than twenty shots were fired.

Tells of Previous Invasion.

According to Willert, Touhey had visited the roadhouse about three months ago and after driving him and his employés from the building had wrecked the furniture.

Last night, he said, Touhey and his companions returned after the place had closed for the night. Willert and his bartender, H. R. Zins, 417 North Clark street, were in the basement when the invaders crashed in a first floor window.

Sophie Kolanowski, 29 years old, a maid, was in bed in the room the gang entered, seriously ill of pneumonia. Touhey and his companions dragged her from bed and threw her to the floor. Then they rushed down the basement stairs to the barroom, where Willert and Zins had taken refuge behind the bar. Willert said he recognized one of Touhey's gang as Roy Marschank and another as a man known to him only as "Joe."

Starts Shooting on Stairs.

Touhey began shooting as he descended the stairs, his first shot grazing Willert's left arm. Willert fired and Touhey's companions answered him. When one of his shots struck Touhey the others picked up the gun and ran back up the stairs driving away in an automobile which they had parked outside the building.

Willert notified Chief of Police Leo Grosch of Schiller Park, who took Touhey to the hospital. The county highway police under Lieut. L. J. Laird and Sergt. Laverne Rowder arrested Willert and Zins.

Touhey is a brother of Johnny Touhey, former beer gang chieftain in the northwest districts, who was slain on Dec. 28, 1927, in the Lone Tree tavern at Niles in a gun battle in which Charles E. Miller, a rival bootlegger, was also killed. The police said Joseph Touhey is well known to them and they attributed his battle with Willert to the beer racket in the suburbs.

Find Body of "Ride" Victim.

An unidentified man about 35 years old, believed by police to have been a Chicago gangster, was found shot to death last night in Hessville, a suburb of Hammond, apparently the victim of a gang "ride." His body was lying beside the road on Cottage Grove avenue, near Summers street, with six bullets in his head.

The body was found by John Miller of Gary and a woman companion, who saw an automobile turn around a short distance from the spot a few minutes before they came upon the body. There was nothing in the dead man's pockets to indicate his identity except the name "Racael Rampeney, Avenue J, South Chicago," which was sewn in his coat.

KIDNAP NURSE, ROB HER ESCORT; TWO CAPTURED

A balky automobile engine early this morning led to the capture of two robbers after a holdup in which one of the men kidnaped a young woman from her escort and is alleged to have attempted to attack her. The prisoners are Emil Burgbacher, 30 years old, 2603 Haddon avenue, and Henry Menet, 30, of 426 North Lavergne avenue.

The victims, Miss Grace Countryman, a supervisor of nurses in the West Suburban hospital, and Milton Barth, 330 South Maple avenue, Oak Park, owner of an Elmhurst hardware store, were forced to the curb by Burgbacher and Menet at Armitage and Cicero avenues. Barth was robbed of $2 and a ring and Burgbacher then drove him to 4600 Grand avenue and pushed him to the street.

Meanwhile Menet entered Barth's car and drove Miss Countryman to a lonely spot in Elmwood Park, where he attempted to attack her, she later told the police. When she resisted Menet turned the car back toward Chicago. As they crossed the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific tracks near the Elmwood Park police station, the engine stalled. Lieut. Anthony Ross was standing in front of the station and Miss Countryman called for help. Ross arrested Menet, who made a confession, implicating Burgbacher. The latter was arrested at his home by Lieut. Charles Welling of Cragin station.

M'DONALD SAYS HE AND HOOVER ASK ONLY PEACE

Admits British Don't Like to Cut Navy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 11.—[Special.]—An appeal to mankind to enthrone peace over the world was made tonight by J. Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, in a speech to the members of the council on foreign relations at a dinner held at the Ritz-Carlton hotel. He asked that public opinion be mobilized behind the peace efforts initiated by his conversations with President Hoover.

Speaking with marked earnestness in what probably will be his last public utterance on his historic meeting with President Hoover, the premier warned that much remained before the peoples of all the nations would relinquish military security for political security. He took occasion to rebuke those who had charged that an Anglo-American alliance had been entered into at his Washington conversations with the President.

After telling of the good will which he had found manifest by the public as his conversations with the President progressed, Mr. MacDonald took note of those who had indicated disharmony with the conferences.

Rebukes the Alarmists.

"There has been an odd voice or two which were out of harmony with the progress which was made," he said, "I have heard that there is some leaven of the old diplomacy in the far corners of the world. When two statesmen get together to talk there are some who think there must be something sinister in it. Well, I will say to these that they are very much out of date."

"I want the whole world to know," he continued, raising his voice, which was broadcast virtually to every corner of the globe, "that during the entire course of our negotiations there was never any idea of an exclusive understanding between Great Britain and the United States.

"Our discussions in the open and there was nothing discussed between the two governments which we would not be happy to have discussed before the whole world. The understanding which we have reached, moreover, will always be incomplete until it has become the common possession of all the nations of the earth."

Sums Up His Mission.

The speech of the prime minister was a summing up of his visit to this country and an analysis of the fruits of his mission.

He spoke bluntly at times to his distinguished audience, which included many of the leading bankers, industrialists, and journalists of the country and was presided over by Elihu Root, chairman of the council, who introduced the speaker.

Mr. MacDonald in his address suggested that the British people would have to be educated to naval limitations. He pointed out that the "British navy is Great Britain itself," adding that the nation had always been of the sea, and that a month's blockade of the British isles would starve the nation.

"The public," he said, referring to the Anglo-American naval pourparlers, "has followed the course of our negotiations through the press and as we have gained points the public has cheered and upheld our efforts.

How He Met Dawes.

"That fact was very well illustrated by the circumstances under which these conversations were inaugurated. When you sent Gen. Dawes to London to represent you he hurried up in the full light of day to meet me in my highland fastness. We sat at a table together, cheek by jowl, as we say in Scotland, and an open window was at our shoulder. The sun shone in upon us. Crowds of reporters were in the yards, photographing us through the glass, beholding our various transactions, noting our smiles, and no doubt noting our perplexity.

"Everything conducted in a glass house, with no secrecy, no curtains, no blinds, and from that day to this our negotiations have been conducted by men who wish to live the open life, and have no desire to pursue the secret one.

"We have not come together for the purpose of enthroning peace over the Atlantic. We have come together for the purpose of trying to enthrone peace all over the world.

Practical Test Comes Next.

"We shall never be able to effect physical disarmament until we have succeeded in effecting moral disarmament. And I venture to hope that the statement which was issued the other day on behalf of your President and myself, in the opening paragraph, has proclaimed between us a state of moral disarmament.

"This is the problem of statesmanship. On the one hand you get your moral disarmament. Sentiment is with you. Parity is with you. Resolutions that read fair and sound well that are carried unanimously. But the moment you start to apply them for the purpose of transferring the mentalities of the people from the mentality of military security to a mentality of political security, then the poor statesman is beset by a thousand and one exceedingly intricate problems.

"Now the task that lies in front of us is to go through that condition here. We have declared that no war can take place between us. We have declared, more, that we do not conceive, we cannot conceive, any circumstance under which the armed forces of the United States and of Great Britain can come into conflict."

Closes a Busy Day.

The address to the members of the council closed a day during which the prime minister had striven with all his resources to further the ideal of a Anglo-American unity to promote peace.

This afternoon at a tea and reception of the Foreign Policy association held at the Commodore, he emphasized that there was no ulterior motive behind the agreement reached between President Hoover and himself. Saying that his visit was made to uphold the Kellogg pact as one of his most precious obligations, he added:

"There is no intention that America should withdraw with England into some secret place and somehow or other plan to dominate the world. That idea is alien to the minds of both your countrymen and mine. But if we pledge our honor there shall be no war, can we not turn our attention to the organization of a permanent peace? I am out for a permanent peace policy."

He enunciated a positive policy of peace, and then told of the informality of his conversations with President Hoover.

Talked Man to Man.

He compared the President and himself to woodmen blazing a pathway, a pathway to eternal peace, through a forest. Meeting ax in hand, they had decided to discuss their common objective. Thus he had gone to the camp on the Rapidan and metaphorically sat with the President on a log and "talked man to man."

While his mission and its fruition were the theme of his later speeches, he avoided direct reference to them in his first address of the day at a luncheon of the English-Speaking union at the Astor, where he faced more than 4,500 persons.

His audience here was largely of British birth or extraction, and the prime minister spoke as to "kinsfolk."

He said the assertion that American citizens of British birth owed a divided allegiance was "just nonsense." The traditions of the old lands, he added, served but to strengthen a citizen's devotion to his new allegiance.

Hobnobs with Socialists.

As prelude to his three speeches, the premier began his day by receiving two deputations. He welcomed a group of prominent Socialists, headed by Dr. Norman Thomas, candidate for mayor, and then promised a delegation representing the Jewish agency of Palestine that his government would carry out all its obligations to the Zionist homeland. He declined to comment, pending official inquiry, on the Arab-Jewish disturbances.

He will rest tomorrow, which is his 53d birthday, and on Monday morning will depart for Canada, where he will remain eleven days

TWO WOMEN, TWO MEN ACQUITTED IN ARSON CASE

The first trial growing out of State's Attorney Swanson's bomb ring investigation ended last night in a jury verdict acquitting two men and two women charged with arson. The defendants, Mrs. Evelyn Sugar, 23 years old; Mrs. Bertha Amster, 54 years old, and Michael and Nicholas Casselli, were charged with setting fire to the Casselli meat market at 3947 Chicago avenue on the night of May 13, 1928.

James O'Connor, his wife, Marion, and his sister, Mrs. Veronica McNichols, 3953 Chicago avenue, had testified they had seen the two women near the store a few minutes before an explosion set fire to the building, but the state's case collapsed yesterday when Harold Levy, chief defense counsel, brought into court on a subpoena duces tecum the statements given to police at the time of the fire. The statements showed that the descriptions of the two women were at variance with the descriptions given by state witnesses at the trial.

The women defendants made a blanket denial of the charges yesterday. The two men did not testify. The state's case was directed by First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup after Nicky De Paul, a state witness, had repudiated a statement and accused police of forcing him to make it.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Demilitarization of British naval bases off the Atlantic coast of the United States, it was learned today, will be the first question discussed by Great Britain and America as a result of the Hoover-MacDonald understanding.

Prime Minister MacDonald has undertaken to put squarely up to the British cabinet upon his return to London the proposition of dismantling the fortifications and abandoning the naval bases in the British West Indies, which constitute a potential threat to the safety of the United States and the security of our foreign trade routes. It also is understood that Mr. MacDonald is to discuss with Premier Mackenzie King of Canada next week the status of the naval base at Halifax, and that in some public utterance he may state his position on the whole question of abolishing British bases for war operations in the western Atlantic.

Halifax is the only British base on the American mainland. The principal island bases are Bermuda, Jamaica, Trinidad and Nassau in the Bahamas.

Hoover Voices Public Sentiment.

President Hoover brought up the question of the British naval bases in one of his conversations with the prime minister. He called attention to the widespread public opinion in this country that the maintenance of military bases, the only use for which would be against the United States, is inconsistent with British asseverations that war between the two countries is unthinkable. This sentiment has found expression in agitation for the acquirement of the British West Indies by the United States by cession from Great Britain in order to remove the potential menace of naval bases situated athwart our principal foreign trade routes and the approaches to the Panama canal and to bring the control of the Caribbean region into harmony with the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine.

Mr. Hoover is the first President to broach to the British government the removal of this potential menace. President Wilson at the Paris peace conference made no move to acquire the British islands. Neither at the Washington arms conference nor in the British debt settlement did President Harding avail himself of the opportunity to press for a cession of the islands although the United States forgave a portion of the British debt many times the value of the territory in question.

MacDonald Grasps Situation.

The British government has been cold to the agitation in this country for cession of the islands, holding that "Britain never sells white men," as one English diplomat puts it, "and never would sell Britain into prohibition slavery," as a recent British ambassador to Washington remarked.

Mr. Hoover is understood to have gone no further than to sound Mr. MacDonald on his attitude toward a demilitarization of the British naval bases on this side of the Atlantic.

The prime minister is reported to have been hospitable to the suggestion, which recently was put forward by Commander Kenworthy in the British parliament as what would be, in his opinion, a timely gesture of good will toward the United States. Mr. MacDonald disclosed a keen appreciation of the logic of the dismantling of the British fortications and the abandonment of naval bases in the western Atlantic if the two countries are to proceed on the assumption that war between them is banned forever.

How Statement Was Evolved.

The prime minister, it transpires, evinced a readiness to include in the joint statement issued by Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald a specific mention of the future status of the British bases off our shores as one of the questions to be settled by London and Washington in the light of the new understanding based on the Kellogg pact. He likewise was willing to include the freedom of the seas question in the list of questions to be approached from the new angle.

The first draft of the joint statement is said to have contained a specific enumeration of these and other questions and to have been close to 2,000 words in length. Mr. MacDonald was in telephone communication daily with Downing street and on Tuesday he began to betray evidences of "cold feet" with regard to the nature of the contemplated joint statement. It appears that he was advised by London that it would be unwise to specify the questions to be taken up or otherwise to become too specific in the statement. The consequence was that Mr. MacDonald blue penciled all reference to the British bases and the freedom of the seas and cut the statement down to half its original length.

Secretary of State Stimson said today that the effectiveness of any agreement reached at the London naval conference is not to be contingent upon a general land and sea disarmament agreement later. It is to be complete in itself and effective at once. He also denied that anything more than "moral force" is to be employed by the United States in cooperating with Britain to preserve world peace.

Corrects David Lawrence.

"In reading comments upon the prime minister's visit and the joint statement which was issued on his departure I have noticed a statement which so completely misconceives and misrepresents the actual facts and the spirit of our conference that I cannot let it pass without correction," he said.

"Mr. MacDonald is for temperance; Miss Wald is a convinced prohibitionist," the speaker said. "But she sought out Sir Joseph Duveen by telephone and got three bottles.

"One was mid-Victorian. Another was contemporaneous with the battle of Waterloo. The third, and oldest, bore the crest of the Bonapartes and came from the cellars of the great emperor himself."

Mr. MacDonald saved the latter—"who knows but he has been saving it to break over the bows of the disarmament conference next January—"but the 1815 bottle was opened.

Ishbel Sits with Justices Hearing Cases of Juveniles

New York, Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Miss Ishbel MacDonald, daughter of the British premier, sat for nearly two hours today at the side of the justices in the Children's court of New York with rapt attention as cases dealing with wayward minors and involving parental control passed before her.

In the quiet atmosphere of the walnut paneled, softly lighted courtroom, which in appearance resembles a library rather than a court of justice, she listened solemn eyed while the justices, humane and kindly, dealt with the problems and tragedies of juvenile delinquency.

Program Proves Strenuous.

This was only one of the many events on the day's strenuous schedule for the hostess of 10 Downing street, but it was one nearest her heart, her friends said, as she is an experienced social worker in the slums of London and particularly concerned about the care of children.

The day began with a press interview at her hotel. After visiting the Children's court, the Manhattan Industrial School for Girls and the Psycho-Educational clinic of the board of education, she joined her father at the luncheon at the Hotel Astor, accompanying him later to the tea and reception at the Commodore. She then dined privately with her friend, Miss Irene Lewisohn, and afterwards attended a dance given tonight in her honor by Miss Lillian D. Wald at the Henry Street settlement.

Seated a little behind Justice Peter B. Hanson with Justice Levy on her right she heard the first case which involved parental control. This interested Miss MacDonald so much that she asked another case be heard, that of an 11 year old wayward minor. She then was conducted to the part of the court from which the general public and press usually are excluded.

Justice Hoyt read and discussed probation reports with Miss MacDonald, and explained that the hardest typo the court has to deal with is that of the border line type of intelligence.

Several Cases Reviewed.

Several cases then passed in review before the premier's daughter, those of a frail looking girl who was used as a decoy by her father while he stole merchandise from stores; a 14 year old girl, charged with being a wayward minor, a young boy truant, and a lad of 14, who had stolen some lead piping.

After Miss MacDonald had expressed herself much impressed with what she had seen and heard, she was taken on a tour of inspection of the court building by Lady Armstrong, visiting the nurseries, where the children were having their bread and jam.

As the Industrial High School for Girls Miss MacDonald saw the machines operating and visited the kitchen where the girls were preparing lunch. Across the street, at 11 Lexington avenue, she was welcomed by her personal friend, Miss Elizabeth C. Farrell, director of the Psycho-Educational clinic.

MAC DONALD'S BOTTLE OF NAPOLEON BRANDY FIGURES IN TEA TALK

New York, Oct. 11.—[Special.]—A hitherto unpublished story of Ramsay MacDonald was given publicity at the Foreign Policy association tea today in honor of the visiting premier. The narrator was Paul U. Kellogg, the toastmaster.

It seemed that when Mr. MacDonald was ill in Philadelphia his physician felt he needed stimulants. They appealed to Miss Lillian D. Wald, New York settlement worker.

"Mr. MacDonald is for temperance; Miss Wald is a convinced prohibitionist," the speaker said. "But she sought out Sir Joseph Duveen by telephone and got three bottles.

"One was mid-Victorian. Another was contemporaneous with the battle of Waterloo. The third, and oldest, bore the crest of the Bonapartes and came from the cellars of the great emperor himself."

Mr. MacDonald saved the latter—"who knows but he has been saving it to break over the bows of the disarmament conference next January—"but the 1815 bottle was opened.

URGES COLLEGE COURSES ON HOW TO ENJOY LEISURE

BY GEORGE SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, Ont. Oct. 11.—Bringing to the American Federation of Labor delegates the greetings of the President of the United States, James J. Davis, secretary of labor for the United States, today predicted an era not fifty years hence when workers particularly of the United States and Canada, through scientific developments, would have much more leisure time. Ten and twelve hour days were the rule half a century ago, he said, in marking progress.

Another feature of the convention today was the acceptance by Prime Minister Mac Donald of an invitation to visit the meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 16. He previously had declined the invitation. Mr. Mac Donald will address the delegates for half an hour Wednesday morning.

"Education on Loafing."

Mr. Davis in his address today said: "Recently we were alarmed by labor being displaced by new machines. No one knows what remedy we can apply except by giving help to those temporarily relieved. Eventually developments of radio and the aeroplane will provide employment for thousands. The wise employer of the future will plan new work for his employé before installing new machinery that will displace him. Every employé out of work is a customer lost. I have no fear of the labor saving machine as long as employers pay living wages and maintain the purchasing power."

So convinced was the American secretary of labor of the approach of the shorter work day that he thought schools, churches and colleges even now should be preparing to teach the workers how to spend their leisure hours.

And, emphasizing the high standards of living prevailing in the United States, he quoted statistics to show that the greatly increased enrollment in American colleges was due to the attendance of students who for the most part are sons and daughters of American wage earners.

Reproves Red Element.

The communist element in the labor movement in the United States received from William Green, president of the A. F. of L., the federation's thorough disapproval of its activities in the recent New York strike of the garment workers' union.

"We are glad that the loyal trades unionists in the garment workers and fur workers have, after a two year struggle, wiped out every vestige of communism among them," declared President Green to the applause of the delegates.

Apology to Historian Muzzey.

signed it because Mayor Thompson and his political organization "left him holding the bag."

"The letter tells the truth of the matter and he signed it on my advice," Bittus said. "When this libel suit by Dr. Muzzey first came up the Thompson organization agreed to fight it. But they backed away and haven't paid one cent of the legal fees."

Dr. Muzzey did not appear in Chicago to end the suit. He was represented by his attorney and by Henry H. Hilton of Ginn & Co., the historian's publishers.

Gorman's statements assailing Dr. Muzzey and his motives and accusing Supt. McAndrew of spreading pro-British propaganda were made in connection with Mayor Thompson's verbal warfare against King George and all his works. The mayor made the charge that Supt. McAndrew had been foisted upon Chicago as superintendent of schools by agents of the king of England.

Gorman's Testimony Recalled.

At the trial of McAndrew, Gorman testified that Dr. Muzzey's book contained "an insidious, vile lot of pro-British propaganda which scorned the high motives of the American colonists, insulted their achievements in battle, and presented the British side of the controversy."

He further testified that Muzzey's book termed George Washington a dictator, a tyrant, and a despot, and that the historian called Washington the "stepfather of his country."

Gorman quoted Muzzey's book as saying:

"The capital of Massachusetts was the center of vulgar sedition, where King George's enemies went around in homespun and his friends in tar and feathers."

"The Boston tea party was the last straw. The colonists had added insult to injury."

Shows Statements Garbled.

These statements were shown in Dr. Muzzey's declaration in his suit to have been garbled accounts of the actual statements in his book. It was shown, for instance, that where Gorman charged Muzzey's book said, "Massachusetts was the center of vulgar sedition during the revolution," what Muzzey actually said was: To George III.'s eyes Massachusetts was," etc.

"The Muzzey text book is utterly unfit to be put into the hands of our school children unless we would have them grow into British subjects," Gorman declared at the trial. "Three states, Washington, Wisconsin, and California, have passed legislation directed against it. Supt. McAndrew not only approved it but defended it under fire."

But now Gorman's view of the Muzzey text book has completely changed, as is indicated by his apology, which admits he never had even read the history before the McAndrew trial.

Malone to Seek Swanson's Aid in War on Review Board

WM. H. MALONE.

Chairman William H. Malone of the state tax commission yesterday announced that he will ask State's Attorney Swanson to bring action for ouster against members of the board of review if the body does not proceed with the conduct of hearings on complaints against the reassessment under the commission's rules. In a letter of warning to the board Chairman Malone declared that he will exercise his right to refuse to certify the board's pay rolls unless work is done ins hrict conformity with rule 15.

The crisis in the conflict between the board and the state commission will be reached next Wednesday when complaint hearings will open. The board issued a defiance to the commission a week ago when Chairman William H. Weber stated that the old form of complaints will be used at the hearings. Under rule 15 the commission prescribed the form of complaint designed to facilitate handling of the work under the new forms used in the assessors office.

Aimed at Political Juggling.

The new form was created to safeguard the reassessment by eliminating possibilities of manipulation on the part of politicians, Mr. Malone said. He intimated that the board's aversion to the prescribed form is rooted in the desire to aid the politically favored in securing reductions similar to those which corrupted previous assessments.

In support of his promise of criminal proceedings against the members of the board if they persist in their effort to balk the commission, Mr. Malone released a legal opinion prepared at his request by Hayden Bell, attorney for the county board. The opinion holds that the statutes empower the commission to direct and supervise assessments and prescribe rules and regulations and approve the form of all documents used in the work. It is manifest that these rules must be obeyed by tax assessing bodies, the opinion states.

Finds Removal Possible.

"As to the penalties prescribed by law for intentional and wilful violation of such rules by local assessors or reviewing bodies," the opinion reads, "such disobedience would be an intentional violation of office, which if it could ever occur in practice, would undoubtedly amount to a palpable omission of official duty, punishable by a fine not exceeding $10,000 and removal from office; if such violation be concurred in by two or more officers it would undoubtedly amount to a criminal conspiracy punishable by a fine not exceeding $2,000, or imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years or both."

Deny Malone Has Power.

Members of the board of review refused to consider the ultimatum seriously. Charles V. Barrett refused to concede that the commission has the power to enforce its dictates. Mr. Barrett added that the board in using the older forms for complaints was in reality conforming with the commission's rules; that the board had a power to put complaining taxpayers under oath, and that the older forms were more compact and clearer and that their use will insure much speedier and just as fair hearing of complaints.

Chairman Weber would not discuss Malone's action.

"If everybody will attend to his business, we would all be happy," Edward R. Litzinger said. "We know what the law requires and will follow it willingly. We will proceed as we see fit."

CROWD WATCHES FIREMEN BATTLE WEST SIDE BLAZE

Fire attacked the yard of the Hermosa Lumber company, occupying a quarter block at Bloomingdale road and Crawford avenue, last night with an intensity that practically destroyed the property within half an hour of the discovery of the fire.

Crawford avenue surface cars were blockaded and the streets for two blocks in all directions were choked by automobiles of spectators.

Fire Marshal Michael J. Corrigan, who assumed charge after a 4th alarm was sounded, ordered a special alarm turned in immediately upon his arrival. Twenty pieces of apparatus manned by 300 firemen were battling the flames at 8 p. m., twenty minutes after the blaze was discovered. Marshal Corrigan expected nothing could be salvaged when the blaze had been quenched. He estimated the probable loss at $50,000.

INDICT CARROLL AND 8 OTHERS IN GRANADY KILLING

Lieut. Philip Carroll and his detective bureau squad were being sought by the sheriff's office last night on capiases for murder and assault to kill as a result of indictments returned by the grand jury yesterday afternoon. The detective bureau squad is formally charged with the murder on primary day in April of 1928 of Octavius Granady, colored opponent of Morris Eller for Republican ward committeeman.

The grand jury ordered that Carroll, four other detectives, and four Italians be held without bail for the Granady killing. The indictments were returned within a few hours after the voting of the true bills and the warrants for arrest were placed in the hands of the sheriff late in the afternoon.

Would Be Locked Up.

Inasmuch as today is a holiday in the courts the policemen would be locked up over Saturday and Sunday should they be found by the sheriff. On Monday a hearing will be demanded from Chief Justice D. J. Normoyle on the question of bail. Attorney W. W. Smith, representing the policemen, served such a notice yesterday on the state's attorney's office.

The police defendants in the indictments beside Carroll are Detectives Michael Shannon, Michael Loughney, George Tapling, and Walter Bailey. Louise Clementi, alias Clemente, Thomas Sommerio, James Belcastro, and John Armondo are the others named for the murder.

In addition to the murder charge all nine men are named in three separate indictments for assault to murder the other colored occupants of the car in which Granady was riding when he was shot to death. Bonds on these charges are fixed at $15,000 on each indictment, or a total of $45,000 for each defendant.

Calls for State Witnesses.

Attorney Smith refused to say whether he will surrender his clients —the indicted policemen—until he has had his hearing for bail. In his notice asking for the hearing he says he will have witnesses present to show the innocence of his clients and he asks that the state also produce its witnesses so that the judge may have all the facts at hand in deciding whether the "proof is evident or the presumption great," which is the test of a bailable case.

"The jury has done its duty," was the only comment made by Special First Assistant State's Attorney Frank J. Loesch, whose assistants gathered the evidence on which the indictments are based. The regular forces of State's Attorney Swanson had no hand in the proceedings and will not participate in the prosecution of the case.

Commissioner William Russell said that until he was officially notified of the indictment he would take no action. The policemen, technically fugitives from justice, were presumably going about their regular duties last night.

YOUTH KILLED, 3 HURT AS AUTO HITS STREET CAR

Anthony Lafata, 25 years old, 836 Loomis street, was fatally injured and three companions were seriously hurt yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a street car at Milwaukee and Austin avenues. The other men are Pito Lamia, 623 South Marshfield avenue; Tony Ligeria, 912 West Taylor street, and Albert Disoria, 1819 Sheffield avenue.

Lamia, who was driving, attempted to make a left turn into Austin avenue. The car skidded on the wet pavement and crashed head on into the street car.

Lafata's death and three others raised the 1929 Cook county motor toll to 710. The other victims:

Mrs. Emma Koehler, 74 years old, 1412 North Karlov avenue. Died at St. Anne's hospital of injuries received on Thursday when she was struck by a truck driven by Herbert Eich, 1402 North Hamlin avenue, at North and Karlov avenues.

Miss Agnes Blaachowski, 18 years old, 4220 South California avenue, a telephone operator, died of injuries received Thursday when the automobile in which she was riding was struck by a hit and run driver at 18th and Clark streets.

E. H. Allen, 55 years old, 4013 Southport avenue. Fatally injured when he was struck by a motorist who sped on at Cottage Grove avenue and 31st street. The license number of the car was not obtained.

Joseph Lala, 14 years old, 825 Townsend street, was probably fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile while selling box lunches in front of a store at Chicago avenue and Larrabee street.

PARK POLICEMAN SHOOTS AT TIRES; WOUNDS AUTOIST

Charles H. Sharpe, 40 years old, vice president of the Vassar Swiss Underwear company, 2545 Diversey parkway, was shot in the right shoulder and slightly wounded yesterday by Policeman Edward Moore of the Lincoln park force as Sharpe drove his car past the Agassiz school, Seminary avenue and Diversey parkway.

Officer Moore said he was escorting pupils across Diversey parkway when Sharpe drove upon him from the west, ignored his signal to halt, and narrowly missed striking a child. The policeman drew his gun, intending to fire at Sharpe's tires, but his aim was deflected when one of the children tugged at his coat and begged him not to shoot, he said.

The bullet passed through the rear of the car and lodged in Sharpe's shoulder. He halted and Officer Moore drove him to the Martha Washington hospital, from whence he was sent to his home at 4718 North Monticello avenue. Neither Sharpe nor the officer had signed a complaint against the other last night.

FIND HUSBAND, WIFE SHOT TO DEATH IN HOME

The cries of their two hungry babies last night led to the discovery of the bodies of Jacob Sochmuk, 29 years old, a stationary engineer, and his wife, Sophie, 21 years old, who were shot to death in the bedroom of their apartment at 1848 Augusta street. Mrs. Sochmuk was lying on the bed with two bullets in her head, while the husband's body lay on the floor with a bullet hole in his forehead. An automatic pistol lying beside his body convinced the police that he had shot his wife and then killed himself.

The bodies were discovered by Mrs. Sochmuk's 10 year old brother, John Pawlik, 1055 West Huron street, who broke into the apartment when he heard his little nephews, William, 3 years old, and Jacob, 17 months, crying when he called to visit his sister. Police believed the double tragedy occurred early yesterday morning, and that the two children had played about the apartment all day while their parents lay dead. The Sochmuks had been separated for a short time about a year ago and relatives said they had quarreled frequently.

[Copyright: 1929: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Rev. E. M. Farrar, 64, Church of England rector in Worcestershire and son of the famous Dean Farrar of Canterbury cathedral, has written a remarkable confession to his parishioners as a sequel of his recent arrest on the Isle of Wight for writing an improper letter to a young woman.

"You now know from the papers," the rector wrote, "of my most grievous sin. It makes little difference that it was a sin of thought only and not of deed. It remains a wicked and unclean thought which in itself makes me unworthy to be your minister and justly calls for your scorn in that, having preached to you, I should myself be a castaway.

"I shall make no defense and employ no counsel, for it suffices that I shall have to resign this living and face as best I can the utter ruin I have brought on myself and my innocent boys.

"My one fear is lest the sinful thought of the moment in which I indulged should bring discredit on God's cause. May I plead with you not to let my grievous sin alienate you from God or be a stumbling block to your religion."

Terry Druggan leaped into prominence again yesterday—just one jump ahead of the law. He got away because his automobile was faster than the car driven by his old nemesis and pursuer, Special Agent Clarence Converse of the internal revenue department. Druggan was still a fugitive last night with the entire Chicago police department helping the federal officer hunt him.

Terry and his companion of years, Frankie Lake, are named in warrants issued yesterday by United States Commissioner Walker on the same charge that brought Ralph Capone, brother of Alphonse, into trouble earlier in the week. They are accused of trying to defraud the government by misrepresenting the amount of their assets in an attempted income tax compromise. Conviction on the charge carries a penalty of ten years in the penitentiary and a $10,000 fine

U. S. Refuses Compromise.

The misrepresentation was in considerable amount, according to the figures of United States Attorney Johnson. Druggan and Lake attempted to compromise on a $300,000 income tax lien filed against them by former Collector Mabel G. Reinecke in March, 1928, claiming that they could only pay $25,000 and $15,000 respectively. This represented their entire fortunes, both real and personal, they declared.

The government refused to accept the compromise and began an investigation of the Druggan-Lake income. As a result, it is claimed that Druggan concealed $98,000 and Lake $71,000. Farms, flat buildings, blooded cattle, race horses and several parcels of factory and warehouse property are included in the actual amount of property both own, according to the government investigators.

They Go After Druggan.

Agent Converse and Deputy Marshal Ben Goldberg sought to serve the warrants yesterday. They went to the one place where they thought Terry, at least, would be, the Standard Beverage company, 1225 South Campbell avenue. They went to the right place, for sitting in his expensive automobile 250 feet from the office of the beverage company was Druggan.

Converse and Terry have had a speaking acquaintance, but not a particularly pleasant one, for several years. When the federal team of Converse and Roche [Patrick T. Roche, now of the state's attorney's office] was raiding Chicago's foremost breweries several years ago they invaded one of Druggan's places and some bitterness ensued.

So one look at the occupants of the strange car was enough for Druggan. With a roar his car went into gear and flashed away. "I could have shot him," said Mr. Converse, "but it wasn't necessary. I'll get him."

Police Search Ordered.

Following Druggan's getaway a general order went out instructing all the police to find Druggan, and Lake as well. They are the second and third persons of reputed bootleg consequence whom Mr. Johnson has gone after this week and how much farther the prosecutor will go is a subject of much speculation.

The law under which the arrests are being made became effective shortly before the passage of the Volstead act and its penalties are even more severe than those of the Jones law. It is thought that the government is invoking the law as a means of curbing big bootleggers who have thus far escaped punishment under the dry laws.

That the Druggan properties are considerable was evidenced, the federal authorities say, when an investigator went to the vicinity of the Standard Beverage company to make inquiries. It is alleged that the bottling works is owned by Terry and the name of Druggan appears on some of the buildings along the 1200 block in Campbell avenue.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 11.—While returning from a dance given by British soldiers at Lough Swilly fort, twenty-two Londonderry girls last night were held up at a lonely spot by masked men. The girls were stripped and their shoes, stockings, and other articles of clothing burned. The girls reached Londonderry at eight o'clock this morning wrapped in blankets.

Although in the Free State, Lough Swilly fort is British territory under treaty and the British soldiers there are generally very popular with the country people.

It appears that the girls were escorted by Royal Artillery men to the dance. At the conclusion of the party, the soldiers sent the girls back in a motor bus. When the bus was within eight miles of its destination, it was held up by fourteen men wearing masks. Some carried revolvers. The masked men forced the driver to carry the whole party to the island of Doagh, a lonely area six miles away. Here the girls were stripped, their clothing soaked in gasoline, and burned.

The girls then were lined up with their escort of artillery men, and told that the entire party was going to be shot. One girl sprang in front of a soldier, declaring: "He is my husband. If you are going to shoot him, shoot me first." The masked men then fled.

The outrage is attributed to Irishmen jealous because the girls went to the dance with British soldiers.

HOOVER'S FARM BOARD APPROVED BY SENATE GROUP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Nominations of the eight members of the federal farm board appointed by President Hoover were approved today by the senate committee on agriculture. The committee's recommendation, it is believed, virtually assures favorable action by the senate.

All except three of the nominations were approved unanimously. One vote out of seventeen was cast against Chairman Alexander Legge and three votes were cast against Carl Williams of Oklahoma, who represents cotton, and Samuel R. McKelvie of Nebraska, the wheat representative. A roll call vote was taken on each board member.

Wheeler Opposed to Legge.

Although the official roll call was not announced, it was understood that Senator Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.], whose criticism of the board was most severe during last week's hearing, cast the single negative vote against Mr. Legge, and also voted against Williams and McKelvie. Senators Ellison D. Smith [Dem., S. C.] and J. Thomas Heflin [Dem., Ala.] were reported to have joined in the opposition to Williams. Senators Smith and T. H. Caraway [Dem., Ark.] voted against McKelvie. Senators George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.] and Henrik Shipstead [Farmer-Labor, Minn.] were not present.

Chairman Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.] submitted the committee's report to the senate and announced that he would seek action on final confirmation next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Milk Producers Get Loan.

The farm board at a session this afternoon stepped into the dairy situation, authorizing its initial loan to a milk producers' coöperative organization. It approved an application of the Ohio Farmers' Coöperative Milk association of Cleveland for a marketing and facilities loan of $600,000.

The application of the association was presented by R. W. Strong, secretary-manager, and J. J. Prindel, president.

According to Mr. Strong, the Cleveland territory just now is in the throes of a milk price war, precipitated on Oct. 1, when the National Dairy Products corporation, described by him as a 150 million dollar combine, with agencies in 400 cities, cut the price of milk to eleven cents a quart. The result has been embarrassment for members of the coöperative, who appealed to the farm board for assistance.

A new $1,000,000 theater for Aurora to replace the Strand theater, which was destroyed by fire yesterday morning with a loss of $150,000, was in prospect last night. Jules G. Rubens, formerly head of the Great States Theater company, former owners of the Strand, and now an official of the Publix group which operated the theater, announced plans for starting construction immediately on the new building on the site of the old Rialto, which was burned a year ago.

MANUFACTURER'S DAUGHTER HURT BY BATTED BALL

Miss Mary Louise Dreyfus, 22 year old daughter of Moise Dreyfus, 3330 Sheridan road, retired steel manufacturer, who has been in a critically condition in Atlantic City as the result of a blow on the nose by a baseball, was reported out of danger last night. Three blood transfusions were performed at the sanitarium of Dr. Charles S. McGivern to save her life.

Miss Dreyfus was riding a horse along the beach several days ago when a ball batted by a boy struck her. Her nose was broken and she was knocked from the horse. Hemorrhages followed, and her mother, who is in Atlantic City, gave her blood for the first transfusion. Walkup McCain, an interne at the Atlantic City hospital, supplied the blood for the other two transfusions.

Although another transfusion may be necessary, her physicians said yesterday that she will recover.

"Bipartisan Alliances" Under Heavy Fire.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Lurid strife smote the judicial campaign last night, the three rival camps tossing at each other revilings and virtuperation over the theme of "bipartisan alliances." The Brundage group threw at Senator Charles S. Deneen and Anton J. Cermak, Democratic county chairman, the epithet, "twin czars, wet and dry, one and inseparable."

Mr. Cermak from the Democratic walls shot his catapult at Edward J. Brundage, calling him "a repentant political sinner, prone to backsliding." Meanwhile the Republican organization set up a clamant call for information. They paged the Deneen group and the Democrats, with an inquiry: "What's the connection, if any, between the Jones 5 and 10, and the Cermak-Deneen 60-40 deal?"

All the wash lines were aflutter with ancient laundry, and the seventeen sitting Superior judges, perforce, hid their heads in their gowns to escape the din as the politicians went rub a dub dub with the washboard.

Cermak Replies to Brundage.

Mr. Cermak's contribution to the night's gayety was by way of rejoinder to Mr. Brundage's City club speech Thursday on the theme of "the wet and dry Cermak and Deneen alliance."

"It is with extreme reluctance that I enter a controversy with Eddie Brundage," said Mr. Cermak, "because no Republican has been of greater assistance to the Democratic party. In fact, the present chaos in the Republican party can be traced directly to Eddie's attempt to become the Republican boss in Cook county when he elected Homer K. Galpin chairman of the Republican county committee.

"I can't let Eddie's vigorous denunciation of coalition go unchallenged when I recall his record as a supporter of coalition. I ask him now if it was not a fact that his lieutenant, Thomas Wallace, clerk of the Circuit court, sat as Brundage's representative on the subcommittee of the Republican county committee which selected the original coalition ticket nominated by the Republican judicial convention.

Asks More Questions.

"I ask him if he did not approve of this coalition ticket at first and only oppose it after I had protested against it and insisted on giving the voters a choice between candidates by aiding in bringing about the nomination of a Democratic ticket which, while including the sitting judges as candidates, presented the names of candidates other than those named by the Republican subcommittee of which Eddie's representative was a member?

"I also ask Eddie if it is not a fact that a year ago he sat with me in a meeting and insisted upon a coalition ticket so as to assure the reelection of Judge Walter P. Steffen, who comes from Brundage's ward. I ask Eddie if it's not a fact that he is only opposed to coalition when he isn't a party to the coalescing.

Canal Patronage Recalled.

"Brundage also has had a lot to say about bi-partisanship. I ask him if he did not approve of the bi-partisan deal which divided the patronage of the Sanitary district between the so-called Crowe-Brundage-Galpin Republicans and certain Democrats and whether it is not true that his name was on the pay roll during that bi-partisan regime.

"Eddie's pretended indignation is laughable. He worked and spoke for Mayor Thompson. He worked and spoke for former State's Attorney Crowe. He has unhesitatingly allied himself with the worst elements of his own party, provided he believed he could profit by such a combination. He elected and helped to keep in power the present chairman of the Republican county central committee, and it was only when he found how unpopular his political associates had become that he raised his voice in protest."

Garrity Leaps Into Breach.

Mr. Brundage is in Washington but other members of the people's ticket against coalition camp leaped into the breach. Gen. John J. Garrity, former chief of police, ripped into "bi-partisanship" as the "progenitor of crime." Mr. Garrity was elected chairman of an ex-service men's committee, which will support the service men on the anti-coalition ticket.

"Chicago will continue to be crime-ridden," said the former chief, "until the people rise in another monster protest against bi-partisanism, because of the impossibility of getting convictions."

G. O. P. Hits at Deneen.

Accusations that Senator Deneen's attitude toward "bi-partisan alliances always depends on whether he is in or out on the deal," came from Republican headquarters. The managers sent out a few paragraphs from a speech made last night in Hyde Park by Robert W. McKinlay, former Democratic county commissioner, in behalf of the Republican five candidate ticket.

"In 1925," said McKinlay, "when the sanitary district was before the legislature with a bill to increase its bonding power, Mr. Deneen expressed vigorous opposition to the combination then in control. He wanted to see the sanitary board abolished and its affairs taken over by the state."

Eighteen months later Deneen went into a bi-partisan combine with the Democrats and this combine, in violation of the law, used more than $13,000,000 of bond money for corporate purposes. It constructed four miles of highway at the cost of $626,000 a mile and a bridle path averaging $250,000 per mile.

"This same combination padded the pay rolls of the district until prior to the November, 1928, election there were 4,800 names on the roll, including some 13 Deneen ward committeemen. The same combination was renewed on a 60-40 patronage split basis after the election. These same gentlemen are now trying to divide the vacancies in the Superior and Circuit courts on the same 60-40 basis. Mr. Deneen is for bi-partisanism when he's in and 'agin' when he's out."

RUM RUNNERS IN NAVY AND ARMY UNIFORMS ARRESTED IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Police today believed they had broken up plans of Detroit river rum runners to run the federal prohibition blockade under cover of machine guns and automatic rifle fire with smugglers disguised in naval and military uniforms.

The supposed plot was unearthed last night with the seizure of a small arsenal which included the machine gun stolen last Saturday from the United States Marine corps reserve armory.

The equipment consisted of the machine run, two rifles, a pistol used for shooting flares, hundreds of rounds of ammunition, blankets and marine and army uniforms.

Six persons are being held as a result of the discovery. One of them is said to have confessed that he and four other men broke into the armory, held up the guard and took the machine gun.

Lowman Alleges Progress.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—(AP)—The amount of liquor cleared from Canadian ports in the Detroit area last month was 45,625 cases, compared with 154,439 for the same month last year.

Assistant Secretary Lowman, in announcing these figures today, said this showed there was "quite a reduction" in the amount of liquor cleared from the Canadian ports and that this was the lowest figure for any month in recent years. The amount cleared last August was 54,520 cases.

The decrease in the amount cleared was attributed by Lowman to increased prohibition forces in the Detroit area, twenty-four hour service by the enforcement agents and greatly augmented coast guard personnel.

ARREST SECOND GARY ALDERMAN IN U. S. CLEANUP

Defendants in Town Now Total 35.

Samuel R. Blackwell, Negro alderman of Gary and the second member of the Gary city council to be arrested in the Lake county liquor conspiracy cases, was taken into custody yesterday by Deputy U. S. Marshal H. E. Miner. A sergeant of police, a city court bailiff, and two Negro attorneys were also placed under arrest, bringing the number of Gary defendants to thirty-five, with five more warrants yet to be served.

Today Deputy Miner will serve the remaining persons under indictment in Gary and will then go to East Chicago to arrest twenty-nine others. Twenty-three have already been taken there. Miner came to Gary Tuesday night with ninety-two secret warrants to serve there and in East Chicago and will arrest 205 persons before he completes his work in Lake county.

Will Be Arraigned Nov. 4.

The 300 are to be arraigned before Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick in Hammond Nov. 4, and United States Attorney Oliver Loomis hopes to put the mass of defendants on trial later in the month.

Besides Blackwell, Sergt. Henry Prohl of the Gary detective division, Bailiff Charles Ernest, and Attorneys Roger Woodfolk and Lewis Sperling were taken yesterday.

Ald. A. C. Whitlock, another Negro, was arrested Wednesday. All the defendants arrested to date have been charged with liquor conspiracy and are under $2,000 bonds. A score of the defendants are policemen.

Attend Murder Inquest.

Mr. Loomis and Assistant Attorney General John S. Pratt went to East Chicago yesterday to attend the inquest into the murder of Sam Goldberg, grocer and government witness before the grand jury, who was shot to death Monday night by James Britt, a Negro. Britt was held to the Lake county grand jury on a charge of first degree murder and Lawrence Seward, Negro, was held in $10,000 bond as a material witness.

$500,000 of Forest Bonds Sold to New York Bank

The county forest preserve board yesterday awarded the sale of $500,000 in forest preserve bonds to the National City bank of New York City on a high bid of $471,046. The money is to be used in the acquisition of additional forest preserve property, Superintendent Charles G. Sauers said.

CHARGES J.T. IGOE COMPANY PADDED BILLS TO COUNTY

Jacobs Asks Inquiry, but Board Balks.

The James T. Igoe Printing company, headed by Congressman James T. Igoe, was charged with inflating bills for printing personal property tax bills to $63,206 above contract prices during the last six years in a survey submitted to the county board yesterday by J. L. Jacobs, county efficiency expert. Mr. Jacobs declared the excess payment was made with the approval of the board of assessors and he asked an investigation by the state's attorney's office.

Charges Inflation.

The printing company was awarded contracts for printing the rolls on a unit price per thousand names. Mr. Jacobs said it returned bills, which were approved by the assessors, listing a greater number of names than the total assessment rolls show. He listed the excess payments as follows:

1926	602,400	250,850	351,610	9,317.67
Total excess				$62,266.76

Jacobs Urges Inquiry.

"We have communicated with the James T. Igoe company to ascertain the basis and reason for submitting inflated bills and accepting payments in excess of the contract provisions, but have received no satisfactory explanation up to date," Mr. Jacobs said. "We recommend, therefore, that this entire matter be turned over to the state's attorney for immediate investigation in order to recover the above payments for county funds and to take such action as the state's attorney deems necessary."

Mr. Jacobs said he discovered the inflation in the recent struggle between union and nonunion firms for the contract for printing the 1929 assessment bills. During a conference of county officials and the bidders the nonunion faction charged the other side with responsibility for exhorbitant prices. Mr. Jacobs said he then investigated and discovered the inflation.

Board Refuses Probe.

The board refused to support his recommendation for an investigation on the theory that the problem was one for the consideration of the assessors in that they had approved the printing company's bills. The assessors scoffed at the intimation of collusion. Assessor John E. Conroy declared that if the charge were true Mr. Jacobs should have uncovered it at the time in performance of his duties as efficiency expert. He asserted that the bills had been approved each year by Mr. Jacobs.

Denies Jacobs' Charge.

"I don't understand what Jacobs is drivng at," he said. "The work came to us each year over a period of several months and we made no count of the names. We accepted the figures given us by the assessors and made our bills accordingly. The charge is without reason. Any one who has had dealings with the county board knows this to be a fact because the board never pays a cent more than it can help."

State's Attorney Swanson declared that he would bring an investigation if one were asked through proper channels and if the facts warranted the notice of his office. He said that no request had as yet been presented officially to his office.

WORKS FOR 30 YEARS TO REFORM MAN, SHE WILL WED HIM TODAY

New York, Oct. 11.—[Special.]—A romance that began 30 years ago on the sidewalk before Chuck Connors' saloon on the Bowery—when a broken derelict, given the "bum's rush" by a husky bouncer, was comforted by an attractive mission worker—will lead to the altar at Calvary mission, Brooklyn, tomorrow night.

There a frail little white haired woman, 72, will marry the man she has spent three decades trying to reform. She would not become his wife before because she was not sure his promises would endure. Now, with both in the sunset of old age, he has convinced her.

Mission workers and evangelists of New York and Brooklyn will be guests at the wedding of Mrs. Lucy Cochran and Richard Shaw, a roomer at her home.

Both have been married before. Spectators at the ceremony will be grandchildren, and a great-grandchild. Shaw has three children and eight grandchildren.

ROY C. TOOMBS IS FINED $10,000 IN MAIL CASE

Roy C. Toombs, former head of the La Salle street brokerage house of Toombs & Daily, was fined $10,000 yesterday by Federal Judge Woodward as a result of his plea of nolo contendere to eleven charges of using the mails to defraud. At a recent trial of several men connected with the bankrupt firm the government claimed the officials had allowed false financial statements to enter the mails.

George E. Kidd, an accountant for the firm, was sentenced to serve six months in the De Kalb county jail and fined $1,000, and Toombs & Daily as a corporation was fined $100. Kidd had pleaded guilty to the charge and testified against Toombs at the trial.

Toombs already is under a three year prison sentence in the state courts at St. Louis in connection with the failure of the International Life Insurance company of St. Louis.

DENIES OUSTER BY EVANSTON OF CHICAGO PUPILS

Reports that numerous Chicago youths had registered in Evanston schools were denied yesterday by Francis L. Bacon, Evanston's superintendent of schools. Two Chicagoans who enrolled at Evanston a month ago were quietly advised to attend Chicago schools, he said.

SLAYER BANDIT FOUND GUILTY; JURY FOR DEATH

Lamar, Colo., Oct. 11.—(AP)—George J. Abshier, confessed member of the Lamar bandit gang, was found guilty of first degree murder by a jury in District court here tonight. The jury recommended the death penalty.

Abshier was one of four men who invaded Lamar a year ago last May, looted the First National bank, kidnaped two tellers, and sped away to a lonely ranch in west Kansas.

A. N. Parrish, president of the institution which was robbed, was killed during the holdup, as was his son, the cashier, J. F. Parrish. Less than three days after the spectacular robbery one of the two tellers, E. A. Kessinger, and a Dighton, Kas., doctor, W. W. Wineinger, were found slain. Wineinger had been kidnaped to treat a wounded member of the gang.

STUDENTS REBEL AT UNIVERSITY IN ELECTION ROW

26 Officers of the Union Threaten to Quit.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Twenty-six officers of the Illinois union, the student organization which controls all campus activities, signed a petition announcing they would resign from the union unless the university authorities reinstated their president, Charles F. Edwards of Kansas City, before Tuesday.

Edwards was one of ten student officers ousted from office by the university authorities following the class elections of a week ago, in which to quote the statement of the university, "disgraceful episodes occurred." The most "disgraceful episode" was a raid conducted on one faction in the election by the other faction, in which campaign literature was stolen.

If the threat of the 26 student officers to quit should be carried out, social activities at the university would be at a standstill. The Illinois union has charge of such time honored events as the football homecoming, scheduled for Oct. 26, with the first Big Ten game here; it runs the campus elections, smokers, dances; arranges for observance of dad's day, mother's day. Membership of the union is 300.

Here Is Ultimatum.

The students addressed this petition to Baird and handed it to him tonight:

"We, the undersigned, sincerely believe that Charles Edwards has been unfairly and unjustly suspended from his position as president of the Illinois union. If the highest officers of the Illinois union are to be treated in such a high handed manner, we can see no objective in our working towards such offices, and therefore, if Charles Edwards is not fully reinstated to the office of president of Illinois union by the 15th day of October, 1929, our signatures below are to be considered as our resignation from any and all offices we may old in the Illinois union.

Baird, upon reading the document, declared he would stand by the union. If the other officers elected to quit in the midst of such important social functions as homecoming, it would be necessary to select new officers to take their places, he said.

These Signed Ultimatum.

Up to Faculty Board.

Baird said he would present the matter to the faculty governing board of the university, which ordered Edwards ousted. Signers of the petition and many other students believe uniting Edwards and the other student officers without giving them a hearing. A petition requesting that the officers be reinstated is being signed by many students.

The student officers ousted, in addition to Edwards, include three men who were elected to the presidency of the senior, junior, and sophomore classes. They are T. A. Watson, Mount Carroll, Ill., senior; William F. Lewis, Lafayette, Ind., junior, and James W. Ashby, sophomore.

Four student charged with participating in the preelection raid were discharged in court when no evidence was presented. Edwards was one of the four.

STORIES OF $50,000 JEWEL ROBBERY SIFTED

CRIMINAL COURT.

Suspicious circumstances in the robbery and shooting of Mrs. R. C. Perky, wife of a Florida millionaire, resulted yesterday in the detention of James Lamorte, alias Lamont, a gambler. Mrs. Marie Knowles, a divorcee, who with Lamont accompanied Mrs. Perky to the Hawthorne race track on Thursday, was released. Lamont is held at the Cicero police station.

Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office saw several discrepancies in the stories regarding the loss by Mrs. Perky of jewels valued at $50,000. He said he was not satisfied that Mrs. Perky was shot by a robber, as the bullet went upward from her left cheek, inflicting only a flesh wound.

Investigator Puzzled.

"Lamorte, Mrs. Knowles, and Mrs. Perky all said the robber came to the right side of the car and seized Mrs. Perky's purse," Roche said. "If he fired then, as they claim, I can't see how such a wound could have been inflicted. Also, the shell of the bullet was ejected inside the automobile and the bullet lodged in the roof of the car.

"The jewels were insured for $34,300. While I am not ready to make any charges yet, I can't believe there was a bona fide robbery. The three were in a car driven by Lamorte, and instead of returning to the city by the usual route from the race track they took a course off the beaten path. No one in the vicinity of where they claim the robbery took place heard the shot or saw anything that looked like a robbery.

Will Hold Gambler.

"After Mrs. Perky was shot Lamorte drove around looking for a doctor and no effort was made to notify the police until a gas station attendant telephoned that a woman was shot. We're going to hold Lamorte a bit longer while we investigate."

Mr. Perky, who left his wife here while he hurried back to Florida at the time of the recent storm, is expected in Chicago Monday, Roche said. John H. Porter, president of the Calumet Steel company, at whose home at 5454 Hyde Park boulevard the Perkys were guests, will also be in the city then, and Roche said he will be questioned regarding his acquaintance with Mrs. Knowles.

In Lamorte's rooms at the McCormick hotel police found sixteen suits of clothes, twenty-five pairs of shoes, twelve hats, and an assortment of fancy dressing gowns.

Holdup Men Rob Four.

Two men followed Arthur Rogers, 4505 Clifton avenue, his wife, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lillian Simmons, and Miss Beatrice Parr into the vestibule of the Rogers home early yesterday morning and robbed them of $100 and jewelry valued at $2,000. Rogers, an insurance broker, told the police he believed the robbers were residents of the building.

TWO GOVERNMENTS FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF MICHIGAN CITY

Michigan City, Ind., has two city governments and the prospects are that both sets of officials will be fighting for control until the first of the year, when the successful candidate to be elected next month assumes control.

One of the mayors is Martin T. Krueger, a Republican who was elected under the city manager-commission plan. The other is Fred C. Miller, a former mayor who summoned seven members of his old city council Thursday night and began to appoint officers. There is also a city manager, Albert R. Copden, a Republican.

This tangle is the result of the recent decision of the Indiana Supreme court holding the city manager-commission plan is unconstitutional. Miller, a Democrat, was ousted when Krueger became mayor, and now Miller says he has never been out of office.

ROBBED TWICE, STORE OWNER BUYS PISTOL, SHOOTS NEXT BANDIT

A robbery victim twice in two months, John Kattler, owner of a dress shop at 2841 West 22d street, bought himself a pistol yesterday. He and his daughter, Eva, 20 years old, were alone in the store last evening when an armed bandit entered and ordered Kattler to the rear. The tradesman obeyed with alacrity, for his gun was there. He armed himself and returned, firing two shots at the floor as the robber was choking his daughter to learn where the money was hidden. The marauder dropped his gun and, as he fled, was wounded by the merchant's shots, as was indicated by a trail of blood leading to the car in which he escaped.

LAUD, DENOUNCE PLAN FOR W. SIDE ELEVATED ROAD

Views Clash at Debate in Austin Hall.

BY HAL FOUST.

The proposed Austin-Kinzie elevated boulevard was described last night as the only measure offered by science for the relief of the growing traffic congestion and for the abatement of the mounting toll of motor accidents. It was lauded as an improvement that would revive stagnant sections of the west side and erase the opprobrium "the back yards of Chicago."

From the same platform, the superhighway was denounced as an experimental scheme of visionary engineers backed by big interests with selfish motives. The proposition was condemned as unsound from the aspects of finance, traffic, and engineering.

Public Debate in Austin.

The occasion for this clash of opinions was a public debate that gave evidence of heat in the campaign on the $20,000,000 bond issue election on Nov. 5 for the construction of the project. The meeting was held in the Austin town hall under the auspices of the Austin Federation of Clubs. Approximately 600 attended, despite the rain.

Speaking in favor of the super-boulevard were Hugh E. Young, chief engineer of the Chicago plan commission, and Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the west park board. It is a park district election and the board will construct the improvement if the bonds are approved at the polls.

Arguing against the proposition were Edward F. Moore, deputy commissioner of public works, who was formerly with the sanitary district, and Emanuel Goldberger, the youthful secretary of the West Side Through Streets association, a small organization of comparatively recent origin.

Calls It Experiment.

"I can't see why," said Mr. Moore, "the west side people should spend $20,000,000 on an experiment to determine whether an elevated highway is worth anything to traffic. If we had that much money to spend, it ought to go on through streets. My ward is south of Madison street and a boulevard on Austin wouldn't do us any good because there aren't any good pavements for us to use to get on it. It would aid suburbanites in getting to and from the loop, but it would be of no benefit to the west side."

Dr. Robertson pointed out that if the elevated highway did nothing more it would take 50,000 cars a day off of the surface streets and leave the surface streets for local traffic. This through traffic, mixed with the local, is killing children and adults alike on the surface boulevards, he said.

"Furthermore," he added, "with adequate transportation the west side will attract large hotels and apartments, just as have the north and the south sides with their lake front super-boulevards. The west side has been neglected in the development of Chicago because it lacks transportation, and only because it lacks transportation."

Mr. Goldberger announced he has discovered "a nigger in the woodpile" in the promotion of the project.

"Marshall Field's new warehouse is at the east end of the proposed elevated highway and Marshall Field's new retail store is being built at the west end of the proposed boulevard in Oak Park," he said. "James Simpson of the department store company is also president of the Chicago Plan commission. The plan commission has fostered this experiment with its visionary engineering experts.

"Then there's THE TRIBUNE. THE TRIBUNE is the only newspaper in Chicago that hasn't given the opposition a fair break in its news columns. THE TRIBUNE owns a building that will be connected with this elevated boulevard by another plan commission scheme, the extension of the superhighway on Illinois street to the lake front."

Mr. Young, the plan commission's chief engineer, read a paper giving a detailed technical description of the project. He also mentioned that the west side committee of the plan commission had approved the improvement. The chairman of this committee is Col. A. A. Sprague. The other members are W. Rufus Abbott, William Scott Bond, Michael Zimmer, Ald. John S. Clark, Ald. James B. Bowler, and President Anton J. Cermak of the county board.

MAN ONCE POOR BOY OFFERS TO DO JOB COSTING 100 MILLIONS

New York, Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Samuel Rosoff, who landed in New York not so many years ago an immigrant boy with only a few Russian coins and a wealth of ambition, stopped at the city hall with an offer to finance and build the 38th street vehicular tunnel at a cost of more than $100,000,000 should the city in which he made a fortune be unable to carry out the project for any cause.

The board of estimate has appropriated money for preliminary work, but no action has been taken on the main building costs. The administration, however, has committed itself to the building, and doubtless will find a way to provide the money.

It is planned that the tunnel be a toll thoroughfare, such as the Holland tunnel, which would remove its cost of construction from the city debt limit.

Rosoff, who got his first start as a newsboy, became a wrecking contractor, progressing to road building and finally to extensive subway construction with a net accumulation of millions, told Mayor Walker that his offer was not based on any expectation that the city could not finance the work, but wished to place it on file in the event the municipal government might encounter unforeseen obstacles which would halt or delay this improvement.

Moose Plan $250,000 Fund for New Boys' Village

Greater Chicago lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose at a meeting in the Hotel Sherman last night voted a $250,000 campaign to establish a "boys' village" of ten buildings at Mooseheart, Ill., the order's 1,000 acre establishment which cares for 1,400 orphans. Col. William F. Buehler, dictator of the lodge and a member of the state board of pardons and paroles, was appointed chairman of the campaign committee.

ALDERMEN ACT FOR ELEVATION OF I. C. TRACKS

Woman Killed as Group Debates on Cost.

Two ordinances for the elevation of the Illinois Central tracks in 71st street, between Stony Island and Exchange avenues, and in Exchange avenue between 71st and 94th streets, were ordered drawn yesterday by a council subcommittee headed by Ald. Frank A. Sloan [26th]. The committee's action means, according to the aldermen, that the citizens in that district have temporarily lost their fight for track depression.

While the committee was in session word was received of another fatality on the tracks under consideration, the death of Miss Jessie Bass, 726 Barry avenue. As a large group of commuters watched Miss Bass' efforts to reach the station at 75th street and Exchange avenue, the woman slipped under the safety gates, according to witnesses, and was struck by a train.

The death of Miss Bass was the third accident reported at this crossing within the last two months.

Elevation of the tracks from 71st street and Stony Island to 79th and Exchange will cost, according to estimates, approximately $4,500,000 and depression of the tracks twice that amount. Costs of elevation from the latter point to the terminus at 94th street, introduced by Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] for the first time, have not been prepared.

Objections of property owners to the depression plan of the Illinois Central, which calls for the city to pay $1,975,000 and the property owners $2,073,000, led the committee to order the elevation ordinances drawn. These ordinances will thrust the entire cost of elevation upon the railroad, which the aldermen hope will bring forth a statement from railroad officials of the amount they will pay.

Up to Property Owners.

With this determined the plan will be submitted to the property owners for acceptance. If they still insist upon a depression they will be asked to contribute the difference in the costs of elevation and of the subways. If subways are to be constructed the Illinois Central requests a fare increase of one cent per passenger, by which method the company would contribute $4,584,000 towards the cost by 1940.

Trade Group O. K.'s Bonds to Pay for Condemnations

Approval of the proposed bond issue of $18,876,000 to compensate owners of property along Ashland and Western avenues and La Salle streets for property taken by the city to make way for a widening program was voted by the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday. The organization pointed out that no money from the bond issue will be available to the board of local improvements for additional construction purposes.

HOTEL IS DENIED WRIT AGAINST YACHT BUILDING

Stevens Loses Fight on Grant Park Issue.

Circuit Judge Philip L. Sullivan yesterday denied a motion for a temporary injunction sought by the Stevens Hotel company to stop the Chicago Yacht club from erecting a new $2,500,000 clubhouse at the foot of Monroe street. The decision held that the club's property is outside the Grant park area and therefore not subject to the ordinance which provides that no buildings may be erected within the park limits.

The hotel company held that construction of the proposed clubhouse would reduce the value of its property because of a resulting obstruction of its easement on the lake front. Evidence was introduced to prove the easement was part of the purchase cost of the hotel's property. It was also said that the permit secured by the club in 1921 had expired when arrangements for the construction of the new building were begun.

Attorneys for the club protested that its property is not affected by the ordinance forbidding the erection of buildings from Randolph street to Park row. The property was deeded to the club by the state, and had never been under control of the city, witnesses testified.

Attorney T. I. McKnight, representing the yacht club, announced that work will start on the new clubhouse immediately. Officials plan to build a four story building on the site of the present club house.

A similar suit brought in behalf of the McCormick building at Van Buren street two years ago was dismissed for want of equity. The petitioners attacked the validity of a legislative act by which permission was given to erect the building. The Superior court denied an injunction and was upheld by the Supreme court last October.

The Supreme court, however, reversed the lower court in that part of the decision which held that the McCormick owners might not bring further suits against the club for losses claimed for deprivation of the right to have their property face on an unobstructed park area.

The Stevens hotel is seeking to enjoin the construction of a proposed addition to the Art institute in another action pending in the Circuit court.

THE MODERN ALADDIN'S LAMP

Impossible Yesterday Accomplished Today

DEEP down in the heart of every man and every woman is the desire to own a home that is different; not just the ordinary run of houses that are so many piles of brick, lumber and mortar, that look all alike, are arranged all alike and have nothing distinctive or personal about them.

That desire, heretofore thwarted by high costs, has been overcome in Schorsch's Village, where, seemingly, under the magic of a modern Aladdin's Lamp homes have been built that have not only individual characteristics in design but also have the low price advantage that comes only with Mass Production.

No longer do you need to accept the standard designs of builders to enjoy the Price Advantage of large scale operations. Low price operation has in the past been limited necessarily to the building of houses of the same standard design in order to gain the economies of quantity buying. . . . However, in the case of Schorsch's Village this limitation has been removed, and with the Price Advantage of Mass Production retained, the new homeseeker can now choose a house from a wide selection of distinctive, individually designed homes, satisfy his yearning for something different and individual, and yet not be obliged to pay a premium price.

BOWLER TO FIGHT POLITICIANS' GRAB OF PARKING AREA

Views Barred Spaces on Wacker Lower Level.

Ald. Thomas J. Bowler [41st] chairman of the council committee on traffic regulation and public safety, yesterday took up the cudgel in behalf of the taxpayers who, he found, are prohibited by signs and chains from parking their automobiles in certain sections of the lower level of Wacker drive. He made a personal inspection of the spaces reserved for politicians and their friends and announced that he would seek a remedy at an early meeting of his committee.

Descending to the lower level at La Salle street, Ald. Bowler saw a large yellow sign reading, "Emergency cars only—coroner's space—police order." More of the signs were found on adjacent pillars along the south side of the drive.

Space for 50 Autos.

"This is a shameful situation," commented the alderman. "I don't believe that the coroner has 50 deputies who need a parking space while they journey to and from the county building. Yet here is reserved sufficient room for that many automobiles, while the aldermen have to pay garage rent."

Ald. Bowler's indignation increased as he walked along the lower level. "Emergency" cars of the sheriff's and bailiff's offices were given a large reservation and in other places the only restrictions observed were chalked or painted signs: "No parking between posts—police order." Some spaces had chain barriers, but no prohibiting signs.

"These chains are always down," said a policeman who was patrolling the section reserved for sheriffs and bailiffs.

"How about this?" responded the alderman, pointing to a chain setting off a lone car.

"Some one must have put that up," said the policeman as he tore down the chain.

Reserved for Board.

Two signs in particular surprised Ald. Bowler. One read: "This space reserved for the board of education by council order," and the other, immediately below it: "No parking—street intersection—police order."

Records in the city clerk's office showed that a council order, introduced by Ald. John J. Coughlin [1st], had been passed on Sept. 11. The order, which was not referred to Ald. Bowler's traffic committee, directed Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe to set aside space for 50 automobiles used by the board for official business.

The nonparking ordinance for the loop, according to Ald Bowler, excepts from its provisions "any emergency vehicle of the city, federal government, and the county."

BLAST OF PAVING PROTESTS LIVENS FAHERTY RETURN

Objections of property owners to a program of improvements on the list of the board of local improvements gave an uproarious setting to the return of the board's president, Michael J. Faherty, from Floriday yesterday. The objections were voiced in a public hearing in the city hall, and in some cases they resulted in abandonment of the plans.

Despite protests the board decided to recommend to the council an ordinance for the widening and repaving of Ashland avenue from Roosevelt road to 22d street at a cost of $325,000. Ald. Frank A. Sloan [26th] based his objection on the "bottleneck" which he said will be created under the railway tracks at 15th street. The pavement there will be 46 feet wide, while the remainder of the street will have a width of 70 feet.

Action on three paving projects in the 41st ward were abandoned, as was a plan for repaving Milwaukee avenue from Halsted street to Division street. The widening and repaving of Damen avenue between 33d and 39th streets was authorized.

LAUNCH WAR ON BONDSMEN; NAB THREE IN RAID

A campaign against professional bondsmen who operate in the Criminal and Municipal courts was started yesterday by Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office with a raid on the headquarters of one alleged bond syndicate in the Hotel Sherman. Three men were arrested.

"We have discovered that these professional bondsmen have been tricking innocent people into signing over their property in blank to be used for bond purposes," said Roche. "Most of the victims did not know what they really were doing and did not find out until their property was tied up in bond forfeitures."

Warrants were obtained from Judge Francis Borrelli in the Felony court yesterday morning. They charge conspiracy to obstruct justice. Louis Potts, one of the men against whom a warrant was issued, was arrested at the Hotel Sherman. Along with him were J. J. Kahn and Robert Henrick.

STREET CAR KILLS CARPENTER.

Joseph Menick, 45 years old, 5135 Grace street, a carpenter, was killed last night when he was struck by a street car at Grand avenue and Halsted street while running for another car.

CICERO AVENUE CLEAR, BUT 13 DETOURS REMAIN

Cicero avenue has been opened between 147th and 159th streets. This makes Cicero avenue clear of detours between Ogden avenue and Governor's highway, Illinois route 49. Lawrence avenue, which has been closed between River road and Mannheim, is expected to be opened today.

However, with the paving season drawing to a close, there are still thirteen detours that will be encountered by motorists on the main highways in Cook county this week end. They are as follows:

BURNHAM AVENUE—Closed between Sibley avenue and 130th street. Traffic is directed west in Sibley boulevard to Torrence avenue, north in Torrence avenue to 130th street, then east to Burnham avenue.

WOLF ROAD—Closed between Roosevelt road and 22d street. Traffic is directed east in Roosevelt road to La Grange, Mannheim road, south in La Grange, Mannheim road to 22d street, then east to Wolf road.

DIXIE HIGHWAY—Closed between 159th street and South Park avenue, and between Joe Orr road and the Lincoln highway. Traffic is directed east in 159th street to Halsted street, south in Halsted street to Lincoln highway, then west in Lincoln highway to Dixie highway.

DIXIE HIGHWAY—Closed between Southwest highway and 79th street. Traffic is directed southwest over Southwest highway to 79th street, then east in 79th street to Dixie highway.

DEMPSTER STREET AND CHURCH STREET—Closed at the Sanitary District canal. Traffic is directed south in McCormick boulevard to Main street, east in Main street and then north over a village street to Dempster street and Church street.

NORTH AVENUE—Closed between Mannheim road and Thatcher avenue. This section of road will be open to traffic on or about Oct. 19.

MILWAUKEE AVENUE—Closed to traffic between Palatine road and Dundee road. Traffic is directed east in Palatine road to Sanders road, north in Sanders road to Dundee road, then west in Dundee road to Milwaukee avenue.

HARLEM AVENUE—In poor condition between Diversey Park boulevard and North avenue. Traffic is advised to turn east in Diversey Park boulevard to Sayre street, south in Sayre street to North avenue, then west in North avenue to Harlem avenue.

LEWIS DECLARES WAR ON STATE MINERS' UNION

60,000 Diggers Await the Outcome.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—The long smoldering feud between the International Mine Workers' union and its rebellious subsidiary, the Illinois Miners' union, flamed into open warfare today.

JOHN L. LEWIS.

Tonight, after a day of charges and counter charges, hints of violence, and one clash had brought a police riot call, both sides were waiting the outcome of a hastily instituted appeal to the court to settle the question of to which faction the 60,000 coal miners of Illinois will give their allegiance and pay their union dues.

Hostilities started this morning when John L. Lewis, head of the international body, promulgated an order summarily deposing President Harry Fishwick and the other officers of the Illinois union and appointing a new set of officers headed by Frank Hefferly of Collinsville, Ill. A truce came late this afternoon when a temporary injunction against Lewis' order was issued by Circuit Court Judge Norman Jones at the request of the Fishwick contingent. In between there were lots of fireworks.

Lewis Order Defied.

They started when Hefferly and his fellow officers appointed by International President Lewis appeared at the Illinois Mine union headquarters here and demanded that President Fishwick and his subordinates surrender their offices and records. Fishwick refused, and fearing, he said, an attempt to oust him by violence, called for the police. Hefferly and his followers, however, made no effort to force an entrance and opened headquarters in the Leland hotel.

In the meantime the state officers who were holding the offices in the Mine Workers' building went into conference and decided upon asking for the restraining writ. The petition was presented to Judge Jones, who was at the St. Nicholas hotel, by Attorneys A. C. Lewis and Joseph Longrigan. It was explained that the application was made to Judge Jones for the reason that Judge Charles Briggle, who is now sitting in Sangamon county, will not be on the local bench at the next term. Hearing on the application for injunction will be set when response to the temporary writ is made.

Lewis Charges Graft.

Today's crisis is the result of years of disagreement between the officials of the Illinois Mine union and the parent body, which has its headquarters in Indianapolis. Lewis, in issuing today's order, charges graft, corruption, insubordination, and mismanagement against the officers of the state organization.

Formal notice of revocation of the charter of the Illinois union, officially known as District No. 12 of the United Mine Workers of America, was contained in a letter sent out by Lewis from his Indianapolis headquarters.

A specific charge made against the executive board of district No. 12 was that on Oct. 5, meeting at Springfield, Ill., it refused by resolution to execute the decision of the international executive board in vacating the office of district executive board member, which had been held by George Stouffer of St. David, Ill.

International Defied.

It also was alleged the district board on Oct. 5 attempted to "parcel out" the local unions in provisional subdistrict No. 9 of district No. 12 to the continuous subdistricts Nos. 8, 10, and 11 after the international union had assumed charge of subdistrict No. 9 and had set up a provisional subdistrict organization.

Lewis' letter also cited the failure of the district board to disavow a suit filed Oct. 4 in the Circuit court at Springfield, Ill., by employes of the district seeking $500,000 damages against President Lewis and other officers of the international union, as a further cause of revocation. This suit was based on an article by Lewis, published in the Oct. 1 issue of the United Mine Workers' Journal, charging irregularities by officers of district No. 12.

Besides Hefferly, the provisional president, the other provisional officers appointed by Lewis for the statewide organization are Joseph P. Goet, Peoria, vice president, and John T. Jones, West Frankfort, secretary-treasurer.

How Feud Began.

The internecine feud between the two mine union groups goes back to about four years ago, when Lewis forced the resignation of Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois union, charging that he was a secret agent of the coal operators. Farrington resigned and entered the employ of the Peabody coal interests, and Fishwick succeeded him as president of the Illinois district. Since then the history of mine union affairs, in Illinois has been one long series of quarrels between Lewis and Fishwick.

Several months ago, Lewis investigated charges of irregularities among officers of Illinois subdistrict No. 9 in Franklin county. The subdistrict officers were accused of disposing of union property at Benton, Ill., without authority. Lewis found the charges sustained and suspended the charter of subdistrict No. 9, putting in his own provisional officers. Two of the officers Lewis removed, D. P. Cobb and E. P. Loden are at present under indictment on charges of having embezzled funds of the union.

The Illinois union officials bitterly resented the interference of the international president on what they held to be their local affairs and President Fishwick questioned Lewis' official status.

Courts Must Decide.

Filing of the petition for an injunction against Lewis and his organization brings to an issue in the courts the question of whose authority must be respected and who is to have control of the union property in Illinois.

President Fishwick of the Illinois district issued a statement in which he justified refusal of the Illinois union to recognize Lewis.

"The Miners' union of Illinois," he said, "has a contract with the organized operators of the state. That contract protects 60,000 men and their families, the operators, coal dealers, and coal consumers of Illinois. It also protects other tens of thousands of persons indirectly dependent on the prosperity of the Illinois coal industry.

"To have permitted John L. Lewis and his underlings to take possession of the Illinois Miners' union would have endangered the modified wage agreement which he fought so bitterly, have plunged merchants in mining towns into bankruptcy, invited another Herrin affair; in short, have made Illinois a black spot on the map of American business."

Hefferly Issues Statement.

"We came to Springfield today, commissioned and under instructions from the international union, to formally demand possession of the offices, books, records, and property now in possession of the deposed officers of former district 12.

"We are rapidly perfecting an organization to handle death claims, industrial and compensation cases, and all other contract cases and all other business of the organization.

"The provisions of the joint agreement between the operators and mine workers in Illinois must and will be carried out to the letter.

"We are going to make a substantial decrease in the personnel of the paid employés of the Illinois organization, legal, field, and office force, with a corresponding saving of many thousands of dollars per year to the membership and with increased efficiency.

"Just as soon as the affairs of the organization in Illinois are put in shape and the evils corrected, as outlined in President Lewis' letter, autonomy will be restored and an honest election held under the supervision of the international union."

Financial Complications.

With both camps preparing for a legal battle, it was considered possible in union circles that the determining factor might be the question of finances.

The locals in the Illinois district, the wealthiest unit in the parent organization, pay more than $25,000 a month in dues direct to the international, while the Illinois district's monthly revenue is said to exceed $50,000.

USHER TESTIFIES PANTAGES FAKED ALIBI AND FAINTS

Employes and Policeman Quote His Orders.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Alexander Pantages, millionaire theater man on trial for rape, today was accused by state's witnesses of efforts to hush things up and prepare an alibi after 17 year old Eunice Pringle ran screaming from his office.

Traffic Policeman A. L. Courtney testified he heard the girl's screams above the roar of autos on the busy corner near Pantages' theater and ran to her aid. He found her in the center of a crowd at the foot of the building stairway, he said, and took her up to confront the theater man in his office.

"The girl shouted that she wanted justice and Pantages told me: 'I want you to keep this quiet and I want no publicity or newspaper stories,'" he continued.

"I told him I couldn't help it if the newspapers got it."

Office Straightened Up.

Roy Keene, assistant manager of the theater, was in the office when the policeman and the girl entered. He took the stand today and admitted that he was engaging in cleaning the place up for Pantages.

"I found some pieces of ear rings," he related, "and disposed of them by dropping them down a lavatory. I had not had time to move anything out of the room, but I had gotten a table moved in and things straightened up somewhat."

District Attorney Fitts showed the witness some pieces of ear ring identified by Miss Pringle and her mother as parts of ornaments which she wore. Keene said they were like the pieces he threw away.

Instructions to Girl Bared.

"Mr. Pantages told me to tell Tillie Russo, the theater usher girl, to be sure to remember, when she was asked any questions, that an interval of only three minutes took place between the time Miss Pringle left her seat in the theater with Mr. Pantages and the time that the screaming began."

"Did you tell Miss Russo?" Fitts demanded.

"I told her."

Miss Russo, a 21 year old brunette, was called to the stand. She told the jury of six middle aged men and six women that Pantages himself had twice directed her to tell a false story.

Swoons as Court Adjourns.

On the day after the asserted attack, Miss Russo testified, he said, "This is your story: The girl came into the balcony of the theater alone and left alone. Three minutes after she left, you heard the screams; stick to the three minute stuff!"

"Was that the truth?" the district attorney asked.

"No, sir," the witness answered timidly. "Mr. Pantages showed her to a seat in my section and he came and got her after awhile. It seemed like the screams came a half hour after she left."

As Miss Russo left the stand and court was being adjourned for the day, she fainted and fell not far from where Pantages was sitting.

Canary's Slayer Is Freed on Offer to Buy New Bird

A "canary murder case" was before Judge Philip J. Finnegan in Town Hall court yesterday. Mrs. Nellie Lyons, 4725 Kenmore avenue, charged that her boarder, James Riley, became incensed at the early morning warbles of her canary, Dickie, wrung the bird's neck and tossed it and its cage out the window. On Riley's promise to buy Mrs. Lyons another canary and control his temper, Judge Finnegan discharged him.

PASTORS ACCUSE AIMEE OF WRONG USE OF FUNDS

Prosecutor Tells Five to Bring In the Evidence.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Following charges today by five former ministers of Evangelist Aimee McPherson's flock of misappropriation of church funds, Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecher announced that an investigation would be made of the administration of Aimee's treasury and that "the entire matter will be laid before the county grand jury if evidence justifies it."

The Rev. John Goben, who until early this week had acted as Mrs. McPherson's assistant pastor at Angelus temple here, and was discharged by Mrs. McPherson; the Rev. J. H. Stilton of Elmonte, Cal.; the Rev. R. L. Larson of Hollywood; the Rev. Willard Pope of Pomona, Cal., and the Rev. H. E. Alford of Los Angeles were the complaining clergymen who appeared at the district attorney's office.

The quintet were accompanied by Attorney R. G. Achers, who showed Prosecutor Beecher photostatic copies of ledger accounts and other documentary material, but they were told to bring the original accounts. It was said, however, that a firm of auditors would be engaged and Mrs. McPherson would be asked to throw open her books. The auditors will be responsible to the district attorney and not to either Mrs. McPherson or her factional enemies, Beecher said.

At Mrs. Pantages' Conference.

The latest division among Mrs. McPherson's flock was followed by another surprise when T. F. Alexander, manager of a private detective agency, visited the district attorney's office and filed affidavits which asserted that Mrs. McPherson had paid a visit to Mrs. Alexander Pantages two weeks ago, shortly after the wife of the theater man had been convicted of manslaughter in Superior court. Mrs. Pantages is now awaiting action on her appeal for probation. The implication in the affidavits was that Mrs. McPherson had attended a conference at the Pantages home immediately following her conviction. Members of the Pantages family denied that the woman evangelist had seen Mrs. Pantages.

Aimee and Mother Reunited.

While the allegations of misappropriated funds were being made at the district attorney's office Mrs. McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie "Ma" Kennedy, were said to be having a tearful reconciliation, meeting in Aimee's suite at the temple. It was the two women's first affectionate get-together following their business and family rupture here two and a half years ago. Mrs. Kennedy arrived today from Seattle, where she won a suit last Monday in which H. H. Clark, an ex-preacher, had sued her for $50,000 for asserted breach of promise.

Accuser of Red Grange Wins Increased Alimony

Mrs. Helen Flozek, 20 years old, 1661 South Rockwell street, who last year won a $900 settlement from Harold [Red] Grange, football star, when she charged he was the father of her baby daughter, yesterday was awarded an increase in alimony payments from her divorced husband, Leo Flozek, before Circuit Judge Lynch. Mrs. Flozek charged her husband was $163 in arrears and asked that the alimony be increased from $7 to $10 a week.

ALD. VAN NORMAN DIES FOLLOWING A LENGTHY ILLNESS

Ald. Harry C. Van Norman [27th], a former member of the state legislature, who was elected to his second term in the city council last spring, died yesterday at the home of his son, Lawrence, at 1427 South Kilbourn avenue. A special meeting of the council was called for 11 o'clock this morning for the adoption of resolutions and to make arrangements for his colleagues to attend the funeral.

The alderman, who was 55 years old and had lived in Chicago for 29 years, had been ill for many months though he missed few of the council sessions. He was engaged in the furniture business and lived at 124 South Honore street.

He was a member of the 53d and 54th general assemblies as a member of the house of representatives from the second senatorial district, and was elected to the council while serving in the legislature. He was also secretary of the 27th ward Democratic organization and was put forth as an aldermanic candidate to take the place John J. Touhy after the latter resigned to serve as sanitary district trustee.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. from the chapel at 1009 West Madison street, with burial at Arlington cemetery.

REPORT RUSSIA AND CHINA AGREE ON PEACE PACT

Decide to End Differences at Berlin Parley.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARBIN, Manchuria, Oct. 11.—Unconfirmed reports here state that the Chinese and Russians have reached an agreement at Berlin for a settlement of the dispute over the seizure by China several weeks ago of the Chinese Eastern railway and the ousting of all soviet officials and employés. It is reported that the first step will be mutual release and exchange of prisoners.

Two soviet prisoners, the first captured by Chinese troops fighting in the vicinity of Pogranichinaya, were brought here today and imprisoned. Twenty additional prisoners captured in the fighting in the Manchouli-Dalai-Nor district on Oct. 2 are also en route here.

Local Chinese papers gave prominence today to pictures of the bodies of some 50 Russians killed in the fighting on Oct. 2.

"Reign of Terror" Fails.

The widely advertised soviet reign of terror, which was scheduled here yesterday in connection with the Chinese national holiday, failed to materialize.

Detectives employed by the Chinese Eastern railway found two bombs on the tracks of the railway last night but they were removed without inflicting any damage.

Gen. Chang Tso-hsiang, head of the Kirin provincial government, reported today that the town of Suihai, located in Chinese territory opposite Kharbarovsk, was captured by Russian troops. He said that about 100 Chinese, mostly civilians, were killed.

NANKING, Oct. 11.—A virtual declaration was made today by the Nationalist government against Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang, supposedly retired militarist, who is in command of about 300,000 troops in the provinces of Honan, Shensi, and Kansu. The state council ordered a punitive campaign against Gens. Sung Chi-yan and Shih Ting-ming, both Gen. Feng's men, who are advancing toward Hankow via the

It is also learned that the Feng generals, Sun Liang-cheng and Cheng Ta-chang, are planning a drive toward Naning along the Tientsin-Pukow railroad, in the eastern part of Honan province. Gen. Hsung Chi-hui was ordered by Gen. Chiang to frustrate this movement.

Another mandate ordered the dismissal and arrest of Lu Chung-ling, minister of war, and Gen. Liu Chi, chairman of the pension subcommittee of the disbandment committee, both Feng Yu-Siang men.

GERMAN-POLISH TRADE HEALS OLD BORDER PROBLEM

Business Cements Peace of Eastern Europe.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Oct. 11.—The indications of the Conservative German political groups that they view the Danzig corridor and Upper Silesia as questions which will not be solved for a long period of years, has awakened Poland's hope that friendly German-Polish relations may be established in the near future.

Germany's failure to obtain the consent of the league of nations to open the question of revising its eastern frontiers is compelling Berlin to take a more friendly attitude, and the Poles believe closer economic relations and the development of trade will eventually aid in solving the border questions.

Deplore Stresemann's Death.

Discussing the present German-Polish relations August Zaleski, foreign minister, said that the death of Dr. Gustav Stresemann was sincerely regretted by Poland, because under his leadership German foreign policy was following lines which, it was hoped, would result in the signing of a trade treaty between the two countries.

"I think our relations with Germany are steadily improving," said M. Zaleski, "and if the present German foreign policy is continued, then negotiations regarding a trade treaty, which Germany previously refused to sign, will be brought to a successful conclusion."

"We do not know," he continued, "whether the recent changes in the Lithuanian government will remove the artificial barrier erected by Lithuania along the Polish frontier. Poland would like to come to terms with Lithuania as soon as possible and I hope that the Lithuanian people are beginning to see that we are not their enemies, but are interested in their development as an independent state.

Friends of Baltic States.

"Recently Poland signed trade agreements with Latvia and Esthonia, and we have good neighborly relations with these countries as well as Finland. During the last year the talk about a Baltic league has diminished and without any form of union we are working closely together because of our unity of interests.

"Poland does not view Sweden as a rival in Baltic politics and the friendship between Poland and Sweden is growing. Sweden is one of our best coal markets as she is rich in ore but poor in coal, and the Swedish firms are interested in the Polish markets. There is no doubt but that the future economic development of Poland is one of the guarantees of peace in northeastern Europe.

"Our relations with Russia continue to be correct, but there is little possibility of a trade treaty being signed in the near future, although we are continuing to hold conversations on the subject. We believe that a special form of treaty is necessary to facilitate the intercourse between a capitalistic and a socialistic state."

Lacey Leads Aviators in Ford Endurance Tour

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Steve Lacey, flying a Cessna airplane, crosses the line ahead of 27 other contestants on the Ford reliability tour who arrived at the municipal airport shortly before 5 o'clock today. The flyers encountered murky weather on their way here from Atlanta, Ga.

Aviation Notes

The battering of waves on the shore of Lake Michigan yesterday damaged the lake front water ramp for seaplanes at the foot of 8th street. The ramp, leading from the shore into the water, was damaged in two places and the structure so weakened that it is not strong enough to support the weight of planes. Engineers of the south park board yesterday inspected the damage and a diver will start repair work today.

A demonstration of blind flying will be presented at Palwaukee airport, Milwaukee avenue and Palatine road, near Wheeling, tomorrow afternoon by Pilot Clifford Condit, officials of the airport announced yesterday. Harold Johnson, flying an Argo plane equipped with an undercarriage gasoline tank and an extra carburetor to permit inverted flight, will maneuver his plane upside down.

The Chicago Association of Commerce has launched a campaign to broaden Chicago's activities in the field of airplane manufacturing. The campaign is to be directed by a special committee to be appointed by Charles Ward Seabury, president of the Association of Commerce. Ayres Boal, chairman of the association's industrial development committee, and George B. Foster, chairman of the aviation committee, yesterday declared that Chicago's present high position as an air transportation center is threatened.

Maj. G. A. Vignot and Capt. Louis Arrachart, internationally known for their flights over Europe and Asia, will arrive in Chicago this morning on the Santa Fé railroad. A delegation from the International Aviators' club and the Association of Commerce will welcome the flyers. Tonight they will be guests of the International Aviators' club at a dinner in the Morrison hotel.

Col. James Fitzmaurice, one of the pilots of the trans-Atlantic plane Bremen, told THE TRIBUNE'S Berlin bureau last night that he intends to fly from Europe to America in a flying boat next year. Col. Fitzmaurice will sail for New York next Wednesday.

CHICAGO PLANE DOWN IN SECOND ENDURANCE TEST

Balked by unfavorable weather in their second attempt to break the world's refueling record, backers of the endurance flight of the plane Chicago We Will announced last night that they would not attempt a third flight this year. The plane, piloted by John and Kenneth Hunter, brothers, was forced down at Sky Harbor at 6:41 a. m. yesterday after 264 hours in the air.

The plane was forced down by lack of gasoline after repeated efforts to refuel it during a heavy fog had failed. For more than an hour the refueling plane circled about the Chicago We Will but because of the low visibility it was unable to make a contact.

The engine of the endurance plane was functioning perfectly, according to its pilots, who said that with favorable weather conditions there would have been no reason why they could not have broken the record of 421 hours, established by the St. Louis Robin. On the Chicago We Will's first flight it was forced down by engine trouble after 291 hours in the air.

Blaze Damages Printing Plant of Dill Pickles

The printing plant of the Dill Pickle club, rendezvous of a so-called Bohemian set at 10 Tooker place, was wrecked yesterday by a fire which for a time threatened to destroy the entire club quarters. Sam Hall, 1216 North Dearborn street, a printer, discovered the blaze and turned in an alarm. Jack Jones, owner of the premises and manager of the club, estimated the loss at $500.

SEES PERSIA FOR PERSIANS BUILT BY U. S. CAPITAL

Closer Tie with America Hope of Shah's Minister

BY H. BASIL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia, Oct. 11.—Admiration for America and a desire to interest American capital in the natural resources of Persia, were the keynotes of the remarks made by Teymour Tash, court minister of Persia, in an interview at the shah's summer palace at the foot of the Elburz mountains. The minister was educated in Russia and speaks Russian and French almost without an accent.

Minister Tash, who appeared to be a well trained statesman when he discussed America, regretted that there was not closer friendship and understanding between his country and America. He said that he believed that a country which stood for "America for Americans" would not deny the cry of "Persia for Persians," but would at the same time, to their mutual profit, aid in the exploitation of Persia's mineral wealth and her vast agricultural possibilities. The association of the two nations, he said, would benefit American capital and enrich Persia.

Praises American Altruism.

Minister Tash credits America with a lack of greed on account of the fact that the United States has never pushed its effort to exploit Persian resources while European nations have done so. While the minister did not subscribe to the belief that American capital has been kept out of Persia by the propaganda of politically interested powers, he admitted that many prominent Persians believe this to be true. Many, he said, believe the murder of Robert Imbrie, United States vice consul who was killed in 1924, was the work of individuals who wanted to frighten the Sinclair Oil interests from their concessions in north Persia. The fact that shortly after this episode the Sinclair agent left Persia and renounced the concessions seemed to point to this conclusion.

Minister Tash believes that American capital would be properly protected since Persia has not been known to renounce a foreign debt, nor has she ever annuled any contract with a foreigner. The only disputed claim against her is one of Britain's for a rifle corps raised to protect India from Germany and Turkey during the war. The minister concluded by saying that he had no doubt that American capital would be welcomed with open arms.

CHEMICAL EXPLOSION FIRE TRAPS FIFTEEN; TWO BURNED TO DEATH

New York, Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Two men were burned to death and three were injured today in a fire which, starting with an explosion of chemicals, swept in a few minutes through the two upper floors of an old six story brick loft building in Greenwich Village.

It was believed that those killed were employés of the Montague Castles Studios, Inc., manufacturers of stained glass windows, occupying the sixth floor. Two of the fifteen employés were missing. They were Axel Jeson, 65, a painter, of Brooklyn, and an artist named Lang, whose address was unknown.

One hundred and fifty persons, many of them young women, were in the building when the fire started, but all except the five victims escaped, down the stairs or over roofs without hurt.

FLIES IN PLANE HE MADE OUT OF OLD FURNITURE

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 11.—[U. P.]—An airplane constructed from pieces of antique furniture by a 24 year old farm hand who never has been in the air flew today for a distance of several hundred yards, then went into a spin and crashed from an altitude of 25 feet.

Shenk drew his own plans. He fashioned his propeller from a post of an old four-poster bed which, tradition said, came to America in the Mayflower, and as a result Shenk called his plane the Mayflower.

The motor was a second hand four cylinder motorcycle engine.

The wing coverings were made of flour sacks, and the braces were metal parts from an old bed.

TRIANGLE BANK TO REOPEN; WILL PAY DEPOSITORS

South Side Capitalist to Reorganize Institution.

John Bain, south side capitalist, has come to the rescue of the Triangle State bank, Cottage Grove and South Chicago avenues, closed recently by the state auditor because of "frozen assets," and will reorganize it and operate it under the name of the Park Manor State bank.

This announcement was made yesterday by Roy Massena, attorney for Mr. Bain, following three weeks of conferences in the offices of State Auditor Oscar Nelson.

Depositors of the Triangle bank, which is expected to go out of existence about Nov. 1, will not lose a dollar of their $800,000 in deposits, it was stated by an attaché of the auditor's office and by Attorney Massena. The new bank is to occupy the present quarters of the Triangle bank, a structure owned by the Triangle Investment company, controlled by Arvid Peterson, who was president of the Triangle bank.

To Have $50,000 Surplus.

The new Park Manor institution, like its predecessor, will have a capitalization of $200,000, but a surplus of $50,000 instead of the $30,000 surplus maintained by the Triangle.

Legal formalities in connection with the closing of the old bank and the inaugurating of the new institution will take place in the offices of Stony Island State Savings bank at noon on Oct. 20, Mr. Massena said.

Heads Several Banks.

Mr. Bain has long been identified with south side financial institutions. He is a native of Scotland, having come to Chicago in 1887 when he was 19 years old. After attending night school, he went into the real estate business. Some of the banks of which he is the head are: West Englewood Trust and Savings, West Englewood National, Stony Island State Savings, West Highland State, Chatham State, and the Chicago Lawn State. He is also president of the Drexel-Western Improvement company and a member of the south park board.

Wrangle at Aderholt Trial as Negro Question Is Raised

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Racial equality and sectionalism flared up today in the Aderholt trial, which already has heard word battles over communism, religion and sex. The attempt by the state to inject the Negro question was unsuccessful, Judge M. V. Barnhill ruling that it had no place in the trial of the seven union organizers charged with second degree murder in the slaying of Police Chief O. F. Aderholt.

Nevertheless, the jury got a hint of the wrangle between lawyers before it was taken out for a smoke. Meanwhile, the defense continued to fight state's evidence with contradictory witnesses, as the prosecution lawyers sought to impeach the same witnesses by cleverly thrusting at their communistic beliefs. The court sought to keep communism out of the trial, as no reversal of the ruling at the first trial has yet been made, but by adopting indirect questions the state lawyers managed to get their attack over.

Race Question Bobs Up.

The Negro question came during the examination of Dewey Martin, a local union organizer, who testified to making speeches for the National Textile union, a communistic organization, in Chicago, New York and Milwaukee. Jake Newell for the state was cross-examining the witness.

"Did you ever know a Negro named Otto Hall?" he asked. Defense attorneys objected.

"We would like for the jury to be excused and for your honor to hear us on that question," said E. T. Cansler, dean of the state attorneys. The jury was excused and Mr. Cansler said:

"We propose to show that this witness spoke on the same platform with this Negro, in which social equality was advocated between the white and the black, in which it was asserted that it was one of the objects of the union to promote social equality."

"That would depend upon what the purpose was," interrupted Judge Barnhill.

"Depends on Locality."

"If the teaching of racial equality would not tend to impeach a witness, I do not know what would," Cansler answered.

"It might depend upon the locality," counseled the court.

"I hope it would impeach him in any locality," snapped Cansler.

Judge Barnhill ruled out the question, and C. D. McCall of the defense staff remarked in an audible whisper that the Negroes were in the Republican party and the communists couldn't possibly get them.

Sectionalism cropped out when the defense objected to a question by the state as to where Fred Beal, one of the defendants, came from. The defense charged the state wanted to show that Beal came from the north in order to affect the jury. The same issue flared up on several other occasions today.

R. H. Howell, a loom fixer in Gastonia, got mixed up on his story concerning the knot holes in union headquarters through which the defendants are alleged to have fired on the officers.

Russell Knight, one of the defendants in the first Aderholt murder trial, told a straightforward story of the events preceding the shooting, but swore he was at home in bed when the actual murder of Aderholt took place.

The National Textile Workers' union will begin a two day convention in Charlotte tomorrow afternoon. The convention will be followed Sunday by a conference of the Southern Trade Unity union on the labor situation.

AND PROTECT YOUR CAR NOW AGAINST WINTER DANGERS

1 Use a free-flowing winter grade of oil in the crankcase. Be sure that the differential and transmission have proper cold-weather lubricants.

2 Have spark plugs, ignition cables and battery inspected. Cold gasoline needs a hot spark.

4 Clean the cooling system. See that all old scale and rust, accumulated over a summer's driving, are thoroughly flushed out.

5 Be sure the cooling system is tight, without the slightest leak anywhere—in hose connections, pump, radiator or gaskets.

6 Add water and one supply of Eveready Prestone and your car will go through the hardest winter season in perfect safety.

7 Go to your garageman. For a small sum he will be glad to render this cleaning and tightening service. It is an investment worth many times its small cost.

Eveready Prestone, the perfect anti-freeze, does not contain alcohol or glycerine. It will not overheat the motor if the weather turns warm. It is a pure, undiluted product. Its permanent protection makes it a most economical investment. One supply lasts all winter, through any amount of warm and cold weather driving.

MY MOTHER—LILLIAN RUSSELL

"The American Beauty" by DOROTHY RUSSELL

The inside story of her four marriages, of the royal personages who made love to her, of plutocrats who dressed her in diamonds

Princes, generals, millionaires, artists, hard-headed business men—LILLIAN RUSSELL caught them all in the net of her beauty . . . They paid her the homage that men pay to only one woman in a century . . . They showered her with costly gifts . . . The "Queen of Light Opera," born obscurely in a small Iowa town, was a queen indeed.

REVIEWING THE TAX REVIEWERS.

The board of review has announced its purpose to disregard the state tax commission's rule fifteen. They may get away with it; that remains, perhaps, for the courts to determine. It is certain, however, that the action proposed by the board of review is in plain and direct violation of the interest of the generality of taxpayers.

Rule fifteen, promulgated for the purposes of the present reassessment, is eminently reasonable. It requires, in the first place, that the assessors make a clear and direct statement of the elements of value in land and improvements which determined the valuation of each parcel of property in the county. The work of the assessors is now virtually completed. It has been well done, we believe. The gross and scandalous inequalities of previous assessments have all but disappeared. To no small extent, the improvement must be attributed to rule fifteen which forced the assessors to state, in each case, how their figures were arrived at.

Rule fifteen goes on to prescribe the procedure of the reviewers. No limit has or could be placed upon their right to use their judgment in revising the assessments, but they have been required to state precisely in writing in each case their reasons for changing assessments if changes are made. No faithful public servant could reasonably object to that provision nor could any honest property owner object to a further requirement that in complaining against the assessment entered against his property he swear to its true value.

These provisions are based on common sense and experience with previous assessments of property in Cook county. They promise a distinct improvement. If the reviewers are allowed to flout the state tax commission's rule, all the cost and all the work of the reassessment of property in the county may be wasted. The reviewers cannot plead a devotion to home rule in defense of their policy. The state commission has in no sense invaded the rights of the board of review. The commission has only required of the board that it follow certain forms of procedure which the board itself, if it had done its job properly, would have adopted of its own motion a generation ago.

The time has come, we believe, for plain speaking. The valuation of property for taxation in Chicago and Cook county has been a disgrace for years. Some assessors and reviewers have misused the vast powers of their offices for their own gain and others for political advantage. Rule fifteen was aimed at these abuses. It forced property owners into the open and reviewers into the open. Citizens of Cook county will demand that any officials who seek to bring back the old order of tax-fixing be punished to the extent that the law permits. In this connection it is interesting to note that the penalty provided by the statutes of Illinois for a palpable omission of official duty by assessors or reviewers is a fine of $10,000 and removal from office; for criminal conspiracy by two or more members of either board, a fine not exceeding $2,000 and imprisonment for not more than five years.

POLITICAL PRIVILEGES.

An attorney of Chicago, who was charged with a traffic violation for parking his automobile in a reserved space in the lower level of Wacker drive, will challenge the authority of the politicians to exclude the cars of private citizens from those precincts. Much of this convenient parking space is closed with chains and padlocks, the keys of which are in the hands of privileged job holders.

The payrollers have had possession of Wacker drive since parking in the loop was prohibited. There have been, however, but few protests from citizens who have been locked out. The incident would not deserve editorial comment if it did not represent the growing indifference of the public to the appropriation of special privilege by public officials and political favorites and the immunity to law which they claim and enjoy.

The principle that public accommodations are available to every one and that all men are subject to the same laws is becoming largely a fiction. The fault is not so much with the politicians who have assumed the privileges and immunities as with the public which has surrendered its equality. The citizens of Chicago have deferred to the politicians in Wacker drive. The citizens of the country are not properly indignant that government officials shall have the freedom of the port, the privilege of importing liquor and drinking it with immunity, while men in private life are waylaid by customs inspectors and slapped about the hips for the exposure of a pint.

These discriminations are accepted without effective protests. They are indicative of a vanishing jealousy in the people of their human rights. The acquiescence of the governed to the distinctions which their servants assume encourages further injustice. If the people are willing to build Wacker drive for the exclusive use of politicians, they confess subjection.

CENSORSHIP IN THE TARIFF.

Senator Cutting of New Mexico is trying to bring the senate to reason and have it strike out the censorship provision of the tariff law. It is proposed, in the new tariff bill, to make that censorship still more severe by putting on the index prohibitorum any works of a political nature which an inspector would consider seditious. What the treasury department might do with that authority is something to startle the imagination.

The index now contains some of the most famous books of the world's literature, writings which are a part of discriminating book collections and a part of intelligent life. If the censorship law is literally applied to them, as it is, they can be kept out of the country. An inspector looks at the law and he looks at the book, and the book stays out. Even a good football university would like to have even its best triple threat man know something of the works which a customs inspector, working under the law, will keep from reaching the library of an American intelligent enough to want them.

If the inspection sent sacks of indecent postcards and stuff printed for pruriency into the fire it would be an exercise of common sense, but the censorship, as it gets effectiveness, is an exercise of the reverse of that. The inspectors may say that literal interpretation of what congress gives them to administer is their only choice, and there is enough truth in that to indicate the inherent difficulty of censorship. It can't state its purposes intelligently or have them served with discrimination. Consequently the customs censorship produces the absurdities mentioned by Senator Cutting. Aristophanes, Voltaire, Balzac, Rousseau, etc., on the index, a great deal of the classical literature of France, Italy, and Spain barred from entry, translations into foreign languages keep out when the originals in English are in circulation, and so forth and so forth.

The proponents of the censorship were not content to have brought forth a ridiculous index in the name of public morality, but in the new tariff bill have extended the prohibitions to include political writings if they can be construed as seditious by the inspectors. Only the operation of such a clause could reveal what offenses against free speech and thought that regulation would bring about. Unless congress changes its policies and its attitude of submission to every demand for prohibitions, the United States will soon be governed as a country with no pretense of containing any adult intelligence.

THE NATION'S STAKE IN THE CAROLINA DISPUTE.

The American Federation of Labor is preparing to throw its full force into the task of organizing the southern textile mills. It is to be hoped that the effort succeeds, for the program of the federation appears to offer the only escape from further bloodshed and demoralization. If there is any statesmanship in the Carolinas, the organizers of the federation will be given every protection the law affords.

Perhaps the most remarkable aspect of the disorders in the mill towns has been the fact that they were predictable and predicted. Not one but many observers months ago foresaw with great accuracy what has since happened. It is unfortunate that, though many could foresee the future, few could suggest any means of avoiding conflict, and only the Federation of Labor thus far has proposed a way out of the difficulties into which the textile industry has been plunged.

The mills moved south to be near the cotton fields and the forests from which comes the wood pulp for rayon. Power was relatively cheap and taxes were low. Even more important in the manufacturers' eyes was the cheapness and plentifulness of labor. Mill owners were assured that the extreme individualism of the southern mountain stock would be an effective bar to the organization of trade unions and to that extent assure a continuously cheap labor supply.

Perhaps that assurance was well founded. If it was, and the mountain folk remain disorganized, the textile industry can look forward, with such satisfaction as it can find, to a continuous feud growing in bitterness with the years. Mr. Pettey's graphic dispatches suggest that the situation is not yet hopeless. The communist agitators, preaching relentless class warfare, have as yet made but little progress. The workmen are still, for the most part, confused. It may still be possible to organize them into effective trade unions which can deal peaceably with the employers.

It is fortunate for the nation that the federation has a real stake in the success of its campaign in the south. As long as the south provides labor which will work inhumanly long hours for low wages the wage level and the living standards of American workmen, north and south, will be imperiled. Manufacturers in other sections of the country will find themselves in competition with the products of cheap labor and will be tempted to hammer wages down even though it is now clear that one of the secrets of American prosperity has been high wages. The effort of the federation to organize the mill workers of the south deserves the indorsement of far seeing business men throughout the country.

Editorial of the Day

[Washington Post].

In its essence, Mr. MacDonald's suggestion is a plan to place in the hands of an international authority the power to call all nations to war against an alleged aggressor. Of course, the constitution stands as a bar to any such agreement on the part of the United States. No treaty can supersede the constitution. The power to declare war is vested in congress. It cannot divest itself of this power, nor can a treaty transfer the power to any other authority. In this respect, the United States is unique. Its powers, including the power to make treaties, are apportioned and fixed by the people, and cannot be changed by the government.

The only method by which the United States could join other nations in a pact providing for universal "police action" or war against an aggressor is by amending the constitution.

It is because of the danger of being drawn into a war among other nations, through interference with its commerce or otherwise, that the United States, soon after it ratified the Kellogg pact, provided for a stronger navy. It can renounce war, but it cannot agree to make war.

How to Keep Well By Dr. W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertinent to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SYMPTOMS OF TUBERCULOSIS.

FOUR-FIFTHS of the consumptives have had the disease progress to a rather advanced stage befofe a diagnosis is made. When a diagnosis is made early, cure is inexpensive, prompt, and probable. If the diagnosis is not made until the disease is advanced treatment in bed for several months is necessary and cure requires a year or two of rest. The expense is prohibitive for most people. Before the case is terminated not only the patient but his family is impoverished and the cost to industry is great. Finally, cure is far from probable and arrest of the disease cannot be guaranteed.

Early diagnosis is all important as a practical matter. What are the symptoms which should cause a person to suspect consumption and to have a thorough examination to settle the question? Dr. Williams and Miss Hill studied the histories of fifteen hundred to settle this point. In more than one thousand of the number a cough which hung on was the first symptom to appear. A prompt and thorough examination of these cases might have revealed the presence of consumption. On the other hand, such an examination might add to the peace of mind of an uneasy person.

The other symptoms, ranking in the order of importance, were: Expectoration, loss of weight, loss of strength, early morning fatigue, cold, loss of appetite, pain in chest, dry pleurisy, fever, night sweats, shortness of breath, irritability, spitting of blood, sore throat, indigestion, hemorrhage, chills, rapid pulse, grip, pleurisy with effusion, pneumonia, amenorrhea, tired feeling, fistula, afternoon fatigue, sore throat. Of these, the first seven occurred with great frequency, while the last ten were not referred to often enough to make them of particular importance.

There are two symptoms which are almost certain to mean consumption. One is spitting of a teaspoonful or more of blood which has come from the lungs. The other is a pleurisy with effusion of origin unknown. Ninety-seven per cent of this great number of people first went to the doctor because they were sick. Less than fifty went because they had been exposed or because they had periodic physical examinations. Many of them saw the doctor because of a cough which held on and no other symptom, but a far larger number had a cough in addition to other symptoms. Expectoration sent many to the doctor as did a great tendency to repeated colds.

ABSCESS OF THE LUNG.

1. What is abscess of the lungs?
2. Is it dangerous?
3. How can it be cured?
4. What do you have to do if it can be cured?
5. What causes bad breath?

REPLY:

1. A collection of pus in the lung. Most lung abscesses are due to tuberculosis. Among the causes are foreign body in lung, suppurating lymph gland, bronchiectasis, empyema.
2. Yes.
3. Depends on the cause, the kind of abscess, and some other factors.
4. It calls for skilled medical or surgical attention, or both.
5. Abscess of the lung may cause it.

LOW BLOOD PRESSURE.

Mrs. J. D. H. writes: Won't you please write something on low blood pressure? I would like to know its cause, symptoms, treatment, whether curable or not, and anything pertaining to diet or exercise.

REPLY:

People with low blood pressure live to a ripe old age. They have few diseases but many complaints. They are not subject to such accidents as apoplexy, nor are they prone to heart and kidney trouble. Most of them are long and lean and of the hungry kind. Many of them have such complaints as dropping of the stomach and fallen kidneys. They are benefited by standing on the head, turning somersaults and walking on their hands. Wearing corsets and binders makes them feel better. The best treatment is the thrill cure.

AREAS OUTSIDE FIRE LIMITS.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[Friend of the People.]—Where on the south side of this city are frame houses allowed to be built. May they be built in the neighborhood of 90th and 91st streets and Cottage Grove avenue? L. C.

Frame buildings are not permitted in the vicinity of 90th and 91st streets near Cottage Grove avenue. South of 119th street and east and south of Lake Calumet there are large areas in which frame buildings may be built. There are also other irregular areas where such buildings may be built, but a description of these would cover many pages. If possible, the best way to see what areas are outside the fire limits is to visit Room 702 city hall and examine the fire limits map which hangs on the wall in the department of buildings. Or, if some specific location is in question, call up Randolph 8000, extension 88, and the information will be given immediately.

MARQUETTE AV. BEYOND REPAIR.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—[Friend of the People.]—What can be done about repairing the pavement of Marquette avenue between 79th street and 81st street? This street is in a terrible condition. G. M. E.

Report is made that the pavement in Marquette avenue is old macadam, beyond repair. The only remedy for present condition is the resurfacing or repaving of the street. If the property owners desire to have it resurfaced by the city forces at the cost of labor and material the matter should be taken up with the commissioner of public works. However, if an entirely new pavement is desired the matter should be taken up with either the alderman of the ward or the board of local improvements for the spreading of a special assessment to cover the cost of the work.

Deputy Superintendent of Streets.

FOOTBALL FORECAST.

OUR Big Ten games scheduled for this afternoon appear so even in advance they might be called tossups. These games are: Michigan at Purdue, Northwestern at Madison, Indiana at Chicago, and Iowa at Ohio State. The Wolverines and Boilermakers, in particular, are difficult to predetermine. Michigan began last season like a disinherited stepson and ended like the town bully. On the other hand, Purdue had one of its best teams in years. It still has its stellar backfield, including Pest Welsh, but the line is suspected of being less sturdy than formerly.

Wisconsin's experience may be the deciding factor against Northwestern. Just how well Hanley had succeeded in inducing his new linemen to charge and block will be important at Madison. The Badgers are reputedly strong. This strength was not dazzling against Colgate, but they came from behind and won when they had to.

Chicago encouraged followers in its opening game because so little was expected. It has a pretty good offense when the regulars are in the lineup, but has proved weak in practice against passes. Ohio State, we are told, will be a hard team to score against, but lacks scoring punch. Forecast:

I say "Da-da!" and lick and chew
On all my favorite toys.

I hold them dangling over the side
And every one I drop
So I can see them falling till
They reach the floor and stop.

It is a very curious thing
That all those toys should go
Always to the selfsame spot—
And why I do not know.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 12, 1864.

THE NEWS—The greatest victory of the war was achieved yesterday in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio. Its notes will be welcomed throughout the civilized world, wherever America has a sympathizing heart or liberty a friend. In the elections in those states Ohio went for the Union by 75,000 majority, Pennsylvania, by 40,000 and Indiana by 25,000. Not only is the presidential question settled, but the greater question of the rebellion is settled by the emphatic voice of not less than 100,000 majority in the three states two of which were confidently counted upon to vote for an "immediate cessation of hostilities." The election in November is now a mere formality. McClellan will not get an electoral vote outside of Kentucky.

ST. LOUIS.—Advices from Jefferson City say that our cavalry was skirmishing with the rebels nearly all day on the 10th. Price's rebel command is reported falling back from Jefferson City toward Kansas.

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Greenhow, the lady who gave the government so much trouble at the beginning of the war, acting as a rebel spy, was drowned in endeavoring to escape from the blockade runner Candor at New Inlet Bar.

CHICAGO.—Charles B. King of Chicago and Miss Ella S. Garfield of Chillicothe, O., were married in the latter city on Oct. 6 by the Rev. J. F. King. Charles M. Reed of Chicago and Kittie Till of Brooklyn were married in Brooklyn on Oct. 6 by the Rev. F. S. De Hass.

CHICAGO.—Maj. Gen. H. E. Paine and Brig. Gen. E. A. Paine are in the city and stopping at the Tremont house.

LONDON.—The Daily Telegraph's cable from Ladysmith says: "War has begun. The Boers are in Natal and the Free State burghers at Harrismith have seized train property belonging to the Natal government. Tonight the infantry is bivouacked on the hills in force." All London seems carried away by the war spirit.

CHICAGO.—THE TRIBUNE at 9 o'clock last night received a cablegram from President Kruger of the South African republic. In it, for the first time, the aged and courageous leader of the Transvaal declares: "War is certain." The cablegram also conveyed the first intelligence received in America that Conyngham Greene, English representative at Pretoria, had been recalled, this severance of diplomatic relations being England's practical declaration of war. The cablegram also says: "This is a fitting end of the British policy of force and fraud which has marked all South Africa with the blood of Afrikanders. We must now make South Africa free or the white man's grave."

CHICAGO.—The marriage of Miss Vesta Raven Lindblom, daughter of Robert Lindblom, 678 La Salle avenue, to Lieut. Clas Ake Paul of the Skansa dragoons of Sweden took place at the Church of the Holy Trinity.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Lieut. B. W. Maynard, piloting a De Haviland 4 airplane, won the transcontinental air Derby this afternoon when he alighted at the Presidio from Mineola, N. Y. It was unofficially estimated that Maynard's actual flying time for the 2,701 miles was 24 hours 58 minutes and 55½ seconds. He reached here on the fourth day of flying.

MINEOLA, L. I.—Maj. Carl Spatz of the west to east flyers was awarded second place in the transcontinental air Derby, although his plane landed here 20 seconds after that of Lieut. E. C. Kiel. Maj. Spatz landed first at Hazelhurst field by mistake.

WASHINGTON.—Hope that President Wilson might soon regain his normal health and fully resume the duties of his office was swept away. His physicians announced that the President shows signs of continued improvement, but must not leave his bed "for an extended period."

PARIS.—The French senate ratified the peace treaty and also the Franco-American and Franco-British defense treaties.

PROSPERITY AND QUACKS.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Just about the time Premier MacDonald arrived on a mission of peace to this country a member of his cabinet, Chancellor Snowden, in a speech at Brighton laid the blame for Great Britain's money troubles at America's door. He complained about high money rates in New York, and concluded: "There must be something wrong when an orgy of speculation in a country 3,000 miles away dislocates the financial system here and inflicts great suffering upon the workers of practically every country in the world. We must try and see whether it is beyond human wit to devise a system where finance will be the handmaiden of industry and not its master."

Another British cabinet member, George Lansbury, says: "No civilization, no empire, living as parasites on the labor of others, has endured, or ever can endure. Only by social control and social ownership can the social evils and inequalities of life be removed." Quoting this in the Voice of the People, Clarence Senior goes on to say: "It is certain that MacDonald and Henderson have caused and will continue to cause more real advance toward permanent peace at Geneva and elsewhere than all the Tory, Republican and Democratic governments since the war." But even so, will that bring the world much nearer to "social control and social ownership," or break the American financial hegemony Mr. Snowden is complaining of?

It is today nearly universally admitted that America is enjoying a goodly measure of prosperity, its labor better employed and higher paid than in any socialistically advanced European country, Russia included, or in Mexico and a few other radically inclined commonwealths on this hemisphere. They are trying to put the blame for their miseries upon the United States, not recognizing that without our tremendous financial resources and willingness to help and take risk, Europe, Mexico, etc., would be a thousand times worse off than now.

Of course, among ourselves we have a few revolutionary socialists and other visionaries and kickers, not to forget a dozen or so United States senators, elected as Republicans and still not eliminated from that party, who are displaying a propensity for regulating not only individual habits but also individual enterprise, the corner stone of progress and prosperity. Yes, we may have our ills, although in far less aggravated forms than elsewhere, it may even be considered highly desirable that finance should be the handmaiden of industry and not its master, but the fact remains that not the Socialists, not the bolshevists, and not the politicians, seem able to devise or apply any adequate remedy or anything serving to procure Mr. Snowden's ideal, without killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. As long as this is being demonstrated practically daily and everywhere, may not Americans be justified in letting well enough alone, even with orgies of speculation, instead of delivering direction of our affairs into the hands of blundering quacks and blustering blockheads? CHRISTIAN BOTKER.

AFTER THE CIVIL WAR.

Arlington Heights, Ill., Oct. 9.—Why pan Claude Bowers for telling the truth? Every one knows that the reconstruction period is the worst blot on American history. Compared to it the Mexican war was a glorious episode in our record.

The Negroes were enfranchised regardless of native capacity or state of education. That act was done by the partisan vote of Republican congressmen. The party leaders cloaked their acts with professions of idealism. They could not avoid knowing from nonpolitical sources that they were degrading the south. Yet they continued to do so for the sole purpose of consolidating the political power of the Republican party.

It is vain to argue that this does not concern the parties of today. When a party shows overwhelming strength at the polls over a period of years, the young people upon reaching the voting age tend to join that party. This is an established fact in political science.

The Republican domination over a period of 18 years following the civil war—10 of these years of domination secured by the Negro vote in the south and by the theft of elections—led to the development of an immense group of young Republicans who have sustained the strength of their party since then and enabled it to remain in power. Republican power is, then, a direct result of the fraud and violence of the reconstruction period. It deserves the odium that Bowers' book attaches to it.

JAILS OR COUNTRY CLUBS.

Oshkosh, Wis., Oct. 8.—I wish to say a few words in connection with rioting and murder in our penitentiaries. I look upon the cause of all the unrest and disturbance in these places of confinement for law breakers as nothing more than too many Evangeline Booths in this country.

It is time jails are looked upon by all people as places of punishment, not places to seek shelter, leisure, recreation and all kind of enjoyment, as many of our goody goodies would have it. In many instances too many privileges are granted to prisoners.

Make it hard for the offender so that a jail is a place to be shunned and not sought for, or waste any sympathy over a law breaker. E. H. W.

A PRECEDENT.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—One of THE TRIBUNE'S London correspondents points out that the English newspapers call the privilege accorded Prime Minister MacDonald of being permitted to address congress in session as an "astounding event." The article goes on to say by inference that it is unprecedented.

This recalls to memory the fact that some forty-nine or fifty years ago Charles Stewart Parnell, Irish statesman and patriot, was accorded the same privilege and laid the cause of Ireland before the American congress in special session. Parnell is gone, but his dream is today realized in the fact that Ireland has her own official representative in attendance at the historic happenings in Washington, D. C.

NEW MOVE FOR LAW TO DEPORT ALIEN CRIMINALS

Genna Case Revived as Proof of Need.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Revival of efforts to obtain the passage of legislation plugging the loopholes through which notorious alien gunmen and gangsters escape deportation was promised today by Representative Albert Johnson [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the house immigration committee.

Prompted by the return to this country of James Genna, who was reported to have fled to Italy five years ago in fear of Chicago gangland vengeance, Mr. Johnson declared he would reintroduce the drastic amendments adopted by the house last February, but which were killed when the bill in which they were incorporated went to a conference committee.

It was admitted drastic changes would be necessary before the Johnson program could touch Genna himself. Picked up in Chicago yesterday Genna was warned by police to leave the city before he was killed by rival gangsters as most of his family has been. The Chicago police told him he would be killed if he stayed and a gang war would result, but they admitted they could not deport him.

Becomes U. S. Citizen.

This is for the simple reason that he is an American citizen. He was brought to this country when a child and became a citizen. When he fled five years ago, he traveled on a passport issued to "an American citizen." Although he is reported to have got in trouble and into prison in Italy he obeyed American passport regulations and when he reëntered the country he registered on his American passport.

Early in the last session Representative A. J. Sabath [Dem., Ill.] of Chicago introduced an amendment to the immigration act which, providing for the deportation of an alien convicted and sentenced to a term of one year or more for carrying or possessing any weapon or bomb, would have, he said, enabled the federal government to assist in cleaning out the gangs which have terrorized Chicago. The Sabath amendment was discarded by the committee.

Voted Down by House.

Representative Sabath also had sponsored an amendment providing for the deportation of aliens twice convicted of vagrancy and where in such case they were found to be carrying weapons or bombs. This amendment, however, was voted down by the house committee and subsequently rejected by the house.

"We have tried every conceivable way to reach these alien gangsters, and we shall renew the effort and keep at it until we succeed in obtaining something effective," said Mr. Johnson. "The argument raised most frequently and successfully against us has been that the proposed amendments would permit many abuses. It is my hope that this argument can be met in an amendment definitely defining persons subject to deportation."

Wage Pact Secures Year's Peace on British Railroads

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Fears that new trouble existed for the British railroads regarding wages were allayed tonight by the announcement that a new wages agreement has been reached between the companies and the unions. The agreement will be operative for a year and provides for the continuance of the two and one-half per cent reduction now in operation. During the six months following May 12, 1930, neither side is to make proposals to vary pay and conditions.

WOMAN CALLED TO DOOR AT CARD PARTY AND SLAIN

Cleveland, O., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Harriett Steinbrenner, 33, of Lakewood, was shot to death late today by a man who summoned her to a door while she was a guest at a women's dinner and bridge party. Police tonight were searching for Walter Chaney, 32. Mrs. Irene Mount, at whose home the shooting occurred, told police it was Chaney who summoned her guest to the door.

Chaney had called at the Steinbrenner home during the afternoon and asked where he could find their mother. The girl did not know.

Appearing at the apartment where Mrs. Steinbrenner and nine other women were awaiting dinner, the man rang the door bell. He asked Mrs. Mount to summon Mrs. Steinbrenner. When the latter appeared three shots were heard and the women found Mrs. Steinbrenner fatally wounded.

A short time after the shooting the police found Mrs. Steinbrenner's automobile, in which the slayer fled.

CONVICT YOUTHS OF MURDER; ONE GETS LIFE TERM

Four youths were found guilty of murder yesterday by a jury in Judge Otto Kerner's Criminal court. William Davolio, 18 years old, 1017 South Morgan street, was given a life sentence in the penitentiary and his three companions were given 14 years each.

The young men were found guilty of having murdered Concepcion Garcia, 837 Blue Island avenue, on June 1. They shot and killed him in an attempted robbery.

Ask Waukegan to Abandon Police and Fire Station

Representatives of the Illinois Firemen's association yesterday recommended the condemnation of the downtown building in Waukegan which houses a police station and a fire station. According to the report, the building is unstable. The brick wall which separates the fire quarters from those of the police was found to be bulging and in danger of collapse. The matter is to be taken up at the city council meeting Monday night.

CELEBRATE 100TH YEAR OF ILLINOIS COLLEGE TODAY

Many Distinguished Men to Attend Pageant.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Jacksonville, Ill., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—The centennial celebration of the founding of Illinois college will begin tomorrow morning with a great parade and pageant and will continue until next Tuesday evening, when President Charles H. Rammelkamp will receive at his house the distinguished delegates and guests, who are coming here from all parts of the United States. A thousand visitors are expected.

PRES. CHARLES H. RAMMELKAMP. [President of Illinois college.]

It is an educational event to make historians pause. "Old Illinois" has put its mark not only on the development of education and culture in the central states but has been identified in an important manner with state and national history of these 100 years.

Weathers Many Storms.

Founded when Chicago was a trading post and nurtured by the heroic work of young missionaries from Yale, Illinois has weathered financial, political and religious storms to face the future with a new program for expansion and influence.

Its first assets were corn and wheat and labor from a small community that lived in log houses and hungered for higher learning. Today it has a total endowment of $1,051,622. It is planned to raise $750,000 in the next two years for a new library, gymnasium, social center for women and other improvements and then go on to an ultimate goal of $1,500,000. Half a million of this has already been promised.

Starting with nine students, it now has 400 in the college proper and the aim is to have a capacity for 600 and to keep the number there as the small college ideal.

Liberal in Its Outlook.

While founded as a religious effort by western Presbyterians and eastern Congregationalists, the college ever has stood against sectarianism in any narrow sense, and has been liberal in its outlook toward the controversy between science and religion.

Although William Jennings Bryan was one of its most distinguished alumni, his attitude on evolution never received support here, and he parted with them also on the question of taking money from Carnegie and Rockefeller.

The college is closely indentified with the conflict over slavery, and the president of civil war days, Julian M. Sturtevent, was a friend and supporter of the martyr Lovejoy, and helped him guard his printing press at Alton the night before he was killed.

Lincoln steps into the picture here in many ways. Sturtevent was his friend and at one time Lincoln planned to come here to study. Ann Rutledge, his first sweetheart, also planned to come to the female academy of those days, later merged into the co-educational institution of today. What history the old elms have witnessed if these two had come here together! Lincoln's law partner, Herndon, was taken from college by his father because of the abolition sentiment here.

Prof. Jonathan B. Turner, a Yale man, was arrested for aiding slaves through the underground railroad here. It was border country and the fight was long and bitter. When the founder of this college started out into the benighted west from New England, Lyman Beecher, the great Boston preacher, told him he was going on a wildgoose chase. Lyman Beecher's son, Edward, became the first president and served from 1830 to 1844. Henry Ward Beecher then was preaching at Indianapolis and often came over to the campus with his sister, Harriett.

President Sturtevent served until 1876; then came Edward A. Tanner until 1892; John E. Bradley until 1900; Clifford W. Barnes until 1905, and President Rammelkamp, who was called from the history chair at Leland Stanford, has been here since that time. He is to take his sabbatical year after this celebration and will tour Europe, possibly the world.

During these 100 years the college has had a total attendance of 9,393 in the college proper, and in all departments, 11,688. There are 2,749 living alumni and former students. Dr. Arthur Frederick Ewert, assistant to the president, has prepared the following summary of the contributions of Illinois college:

To education—the final judgment of a college, as of a tree, must be by its fruits. Illinois has given to the cause of education nine college presidents—Robert W. Patterson, class of 1837, Lake Forest college; William Curtiss, 1838, Knox college; Newton Bateman, 1843, Knox college; Reuben Andrus, Indiana Asbury college (now De Pauw university); Edward A. Tanner, 1857, Illinois college; William Thomas Reid, 1862-'63, University of California; Joseph R. Harker, 1888, Illinois Woman's college; William Mather Lewis, M. A., 1902, Lafayette college, and Wiley Lin Hurie, 1906, College of the Ozarks.

To the church: Illinois college likewise has contributed to the church many of its leaders, past and present. Out of a list of over one hundred prominent clergymen who have had their collegiate training in Illinois college, space permits the mention only of Robert Patterson, class of 1837, the first pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Chicago and moderator of the general assembly; Thomas Laurie, 1838, missionary to Persia; Samuel Fairbank, 1842, missionary to India; Thomas K. Beecher, 1843, Elmira, N. Y., and T. N. Morrison, 1870, Episcopal bishop of Iowa.

For State and Nation.

To the state and nation: Illinois college has contributed also to the political life of the state and nation. Illinois college has given to its own state two governors, father and son, Richard Yates Sr., class of 1835, and Richard Yates Jr., class of 1880; Stephen Hempstead, the second governor of Iowa, attended Illinois college through the years 1831-'33; William H. Herndon, who was a student at Illinois college, became the law partner of Abraham Lincoln; William Jayne, class of 1847, became the territorial governor of Dakota, and William Jennings Bryan graduated from Illinois college in 1881.

To the military defense of the nation Illinois college contributed during the civil war eight brigadier generals, John Cool, class of 1840; Daniel Draper, 1858; Elisha B. Hamilton, 1860; Charles E. Lippincott, 1848; John Irving Rinaker, 1853; Leonard F. Ross, 1845; John Tillson, 1846, and Henry Yates, 1857. In addition Illinois college gave to the Union army twelve colonels, two lieutenants colonels, eight majors and nineteen captains. The two hundred forty men who enlisted in the cause of freedom from Illinois college compares well with Bowdoin's 267, Williams' 308, Amherst's 273, and Princeton's 150.

It is of interest to know that the oldest living alumnus of Illinois college rose to the rank of major in the civil war, George Murray McConnell, class of 1852. Furthermore, during the world war more than 400 Illinois college men joined the colors.

Alumnus Nearly 100 Years Old.

Maj. McConnell, who may live to celebrate his 100th birthday in four more years, now lives in Indianapolis, and is planning to drive over with his son for the centennial. After the parade tomorrow, there will be a football game, with Monmouth the contestant.

The centennial sermon will be delivered on Sunday morning by Dr. Fred B. Smith, New York, moderator national council of the Congregational church. In the afternoon the New Tanner Memorial library will be dedicated by Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, famous author of biblical literature. On Monday, addresses will be given during the day by Prof. Alexander Meiklejohn, University of Wisconsin; Morton D. Hull, Chicago; William Rufus Dawes, Chicago; President Livingston Farrand, Cornell university; Prof. Edward Capps, Princeton university, and others.

Tuesday will be given over to the centennial address, to be delivered by President James Rowland Angell, Yale university, and to the centennial luncheon, of which Everett Dean Martin, 1904 president of Cooper Union, New York, will be the toastmaster.

SMOOT, SIMMONS FIGHT VERBAL WARS, BUT NEITHER HEARS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Senators Smoot and Simmons Republican and Democratic leaders in the tariff bill debate, are unable to hear each other talk at ten feet distance. Long ago other senators and gallery occupants have given up trying to catch the words of the Smoot Simmons colloquies, but it was thought they could understand each other. The Congressional Record, however, reveals the following exchange:

Mr. Simmons—I simply want to ask the senator a question.

Mr. Smoot—We cannot hear a word that is being said by senators on the other side of the chamber.

Mr. Simmons—I am sorry the senator from Utah cannot hear me. I am troubled in the same way when he is talking.

END CENSORSHIP OF LITERATURE BY CUSTOMS FORCE

Senators Vote Change in Tariff Bill.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Censorship of literature by customs officials was disapproved today by the senate.

By the narrow margin of two votes, an amendment to the tariff bill eliminating from the present law the ban against importation of obscene books and pamphlets was adopted. The amendment retains restrictions against importation of indecent and obscene paintings and photographs and various immoral articles. It also contains a new prohibition against the importation of books or drawings urging forcible resistance to laws of the United States or threats against the life of any person in this country. This clause is a modification of the provision in the house bill prohibiting entry of seditious literature. As passed by the house and approved by the senate finance committee this provision applied also to writings advocating treason or insurrection.

Censorship Exercised.

The censorship clause has been enforced several times in recent years. Among the books barred were "Ulysses," by James Joyce; "The Well of Loneliness," by Miss Radclyffe Hale; Voltaire's "Candide," barred by customs men in Boston but later held pure by Washington officials, and "the Decameron," by Boccaccio.

The vote in the senate to put a limit on censorship was 38 to 36. Voting in the affirmative were 15 Republicans and 23 Democrats. Against it were 28 Republicans and 8 Democrats.

The action represented a victory for Senator Bronson Cutting [Rep., N. M.], newspaper publisher and Harvard graduate, who, for several hours recited to the senate the story of censorship of imported literature, including many world famous classics, by customs officials.

In the vote on the successful Cutting amendment, the two Illinois senators divided, Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep.] favoring the amendment, and Senator Charles S. Deneen [Rep.] opposing it. The two Michigan senators also divided, Senator James Couzens [Rep.] voting for it and Senator A. H. Vandenberg [Rep.] against it. Senators Robert M. La Follette and John J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.], S. W. Brookhart [Rep., Ia.], and Daniel Steck [Dem., Ia.] voted for the amendment, while Senators James E. Watson and Arthur Robinson [Rep., Ind.] voted against it.

Debate Proves Lively.

A lively debate preceded action on the amendment. Senator M. E. Tydings [Dem., Md.], speaking in behalf of the amendment, asserted that "We are not running a Sunday school, but a government." Present restrictions against importation of obscene literature which have been interpreted by customs officials as barring some of the best known of the classics "have made us the laughing stock of the entire world," Senator Tydings said.

Senator La Follette, in advocating the amendment declared that the prohibition against entry of obscene literature is "a step toward censorship of reading matter which strikes at the very foundations upon which this government is founded."

WARD FIGHT ON FOR ADAMOWSKI SEAT IN COUNCIL

The aldermanic contest in the 38th ward between John J. Kaleth and Frank H. Landmesser over the succession to the late Ald. Max Adamowski warmed up a bit last night. Accusations that Kaleth, a Democrat, has been adopted by the city hall organization in the ward were made at a meeting of the Democratic ward club.

"Kaleth approached our ward committeeman, Clayton F. Smith, for the indorsement of himself to succeed the late Ald. Adamowski," said a statement issued on behalf of Landmesser. "Mr. Smith told Kaleth he has taken care of Ben Adamowski, a son of the late alderman, as an attorney in the recorder's office and he felt under the circumstances he could not take care of any other members of the family. Mr. Kaleth is a brother-in-law of Ben Adamowski. Kaleth appeared before the Democratic ward organization and was turned down. Next we heard of him he was indorsed by the old W. H. Thompson Republican organization."

The Kaleth camp sent out an announcement that Mathias A. Klinger, Republican, having withdrawn in Kaleth's favor, the ward Republican club which had indorsed Klinger, put its O. K. on Kaleth. The statement charged Mr. Smith, who is Democratic managing chairman, with "ambitions to dominate the ward."

BOYS ARRAIGNED AS ROBBERS.

Frank James, 19 years old, 2151 Madison street, was held to the grand jury in $3,000 bonds, and his brother Earl, 15 years old, was turned over to Juvenile authorities yesterday when they were arraigned in Boys' court on charges of robbing a hardware store at 2246 Madison street.

TRIAL OF CUNEO BUILDING SUITS SET FOR OCT. 28

The trial of the controversy over the proposed John F. Cuneo tower at Randolph street and Michigan avenue was set for Oct. 28 yesterday by Circuit Judge Taylor. The date was fixed when Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, representing property owners who seek injunctions to halt work on the tower, demanded an early trial.

The property owners charge unjust discrimination in the passage by the city council of an amendment to the building and zoning code which gave Cuneo the right to build a sixty story structure rising 440 feet without setbacks. The previous height limit was 264 feet. The property owners ask nullification of the amendment, reversal of the city zoning board decision upholding it, and cancellation of the building permit.

British Turn to Russian Books, Critic Declares

Von Hoffmann Memoirs Also Stir Interest.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—Arnold Bennett is back from Russia and is writing an account of the country as it appeared to him. This account is appearing first in the London Daily Express, but will be published later on in book form. Mr. Bennett also has a new play coming on, but at the moment it has no title.

EDGAR WALLACE.

The London Book society has chosen Richard Hughes' "A High Wind in Jamaica" (in America 'The Innocent Voyage') as its September-October book of the month. So far, the other choices of the Book society have been "The Love of the Foolish Angel," by Helen Beauclerc; Kataev's "The Embezzlers;" "Henry VIII.," by Francis Hackett (who seems to be confused in English eyes with the dramatist, Walter Hackett); "Nicky, Son of Egg," by Gerald Bullett.

The "Henry VIII." has been adversely criticized on account of its style, and some of the quidnuncs have fallen upon it as the essay of a layman in a specialist occupation; but the public has been all upon Mr. Hackett's side.

I hear that the great Hodder & Stoughton religious novel prize has been awarded to a book written by Miss Lettice Cooper, a young author who has already published four historical novels. I am not familiar with any of these, but I am told they are very good.

The Jonathan Cape prize novel competition is now closed, and the judges are anxiously considering their verdict. None of them knows the name of the author of any one of the manuscripts submitted for judgment, so the verdict ought to be impartial.

At the beginning of the war, we were all reading Russian novels, but with the advent of bolshevism I think many people decided that they no longer cared for anything Russian. At any rate, there was a definite slump. I am glad to see that there is a revival in Russian books. There are several in the publishers' lists this autumn, and the most interesting of them is a long play, never hitherto translated but now to be translated by John Cournos, called "That Worthless Fellow Platonoff," by Tchehov.

Mr. Cournos also is translating "Short Stories Out of Soviet Russia." And another good item is the complete translation, by Miss Nathalie Duddington, of Goncharov's great novel, "Oblomov." This latter, which I have read, is superb. Some years ago a translation was published, but it contained only about a half of the complete book. The new version is described as being complete.

A very important German war book which is to appear consists of the memoirs of Gen. von Hoffmann. His "War Diaries," covering the German military feats on the eastern front, and beginning with the battle of Tannenburg (he says the Germans knew all the Russian plans) are extremely interesting. He gives some close up pictures of Ludendorf. The book is translated by Eric Sutton, who is known to all as the translator of "Sergeant Grischa."

Mr. Edgar Wallace is taking a rest from crime. As is known, his great passion is the turf, and he has not only written a new racing play, but is to publish during the season a long racing novel, "The Green Ribbon." But Mr. Wallace has other interests besides racing and crime, and one of these is the theater. He has blossomed out as a producer. He is also a backer!

Enough About Boccaccio to Explain His Reputation

"The Filostrato of Giovanni Boccaccio," translated by Nathaniel E. Griffin and Arthur B. Myrick [University of Pennsylvania Press], is the first complete edition of the famous love poem of Boccaccio who is known, wherever any of the civilized languages are read, as the author of the "Decameron," but whose early ardent romances are almost unknown. He wrote the 'Filiostrato" out of his own love. Taking an old French version of the story of Troy for plot and following the conventions of courtly love in composition, the young poet poured out his own desperate devotion to the lovely Neopolitan. This poem was the source of Chaucer's "Troilus and Criseyde" and in turn furnished the model for Shakespeare and Dryden in their Troilus and Cressida creations.

Authors Deny Philadelphia Exposition Proved Failure

"The Sesquicentennial International exposition" is a complete record of the Philadelphia exposition written by its director in chief, E. L. Austin, and Odell Hauser, director of its publicity. The book contains not only descriptions of every phase of the exposition but complete lists of every group connected with it, and is, therefore, a book of reference. One of the chapters is devoted to the declaration by the authors that the exposition was not, as some have suggested, a failure.

Terhune Writes Another Book About His Kennels

"Lad of Sunnybank," by Albert Payson Terhune [Harper's], continues the adventures of "Lad," the collie who is said to be the most popular dog hero in modern literature. Mr. Terhune writes his stories from life, as it were, for he raises some of the best known collies in America. His Sunnybank kennels are famous. So are his dog books.

BRITISH ENGINEER SAYS HE'S UNCLAIMED NEPHEW OF GEORGE V.

'My Uncle, King George V.," by C. G. Gordon Haddon (Harhill Press), is supposed to be a sort of "President's Daughter," but one hastens to assure you that it isn't. It is the life story of a man who claims to be the illegitimate son of the duke of Clarence, the brother of the present king of England. He says in a preface that he tried to get his autobiography published in England but that no publisher there would touch it. The gist of his story is that he suffered at the hands of his royal relatives, who pushed him about all over the world, as a royal engineer, to keep him from being a living advertisement of his father's indiscretion.

"Early Candlelight," by Maud Hart Lovelace. [John Day.]

Maud Hart Lovelace has made a valuable contribution to the history of frontier life in Minnesota and also has written a lively and interesting novel in "Early Candlelight." The reader is intrigued equally by the characters and by their environment. Here is no mere mass of data wrapped up in a sentimental romance, but a story full of wit, humor and understanding about people who, against the background of a colorful, bygone era, move and act much as we do today. Theirs was a more leisurely existence, but the leisure was crammed with the problems facing a civilized group in a vast and virgin country.

The author takes Jasper Page, a wealthy fur trader and friend of both the little band of settlers at Fort Snelling and their Indian neighbors, the Sioux, and then, affording a direct contrast, she takes Dee Dee Du Gay, daughter of voyageurs, and through their eyes the reader sees the daily events and adventures of the place.

Mrs. Lovelace writes with as deft and sure a touch as though she had been there herself. She introduces you to the gay life of the fort and to the stone house on the island, filled with treasures brought thousands of miles from Boston, and to the cluster of houses outside the fort where live the Du Gays and their numerous children.

Long legged Dee Dee with her friendly, honest eyes wins her way into your heart. Shouldered with the burden of her younger brothers and sisters, she still has time to shower sympathy on others and to enjoy with intense appreciation the few pleasures that come her way.

Her visit to Jasper Page's house is an unforgettable scene. You can see her standing in the first dining room she ever has seen—"a room just for eating!"—overcome by its magnificence, and luxuriating in the feel of the thick carpet against her bare feet.

And when the Du Gays are forced to move, bag and baggage, you can see them all trudging down the road to the river, singing a French song, Dee Dee lugging along a lamb, and her mother carrying a couple of hen coops filled with chickens. Those were the days when moving was an ordeal!

Anne Parrish Is Less Merry in This Book

"Methodist Faun" Has Traces of Sadness.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Methodist Faun," by Anne Parrish [Harpers].

Anne Parrish has somewhat deserted, in her latest novel, her usual gay material. Whatever her heroes or heroines have been, she has seen them with laughter. "The Methodist Faun" she sees rather with echoes of her former laughter. She makes the hero as ridiculous as the heroes and heroines of all her other books have been — ridiculous to the world that sees them with a laughing eye, but her ridicule of the Methodist faun is shot through with a pity that she never felt for any of her other characters.

ANNE PARRISH.

Toward them all she has been amusingly understanding. Toward the Methodist faun she is pityingly understanding. And strangely enough, the result is not so appealing as her detached amusement always has been. The boy yearns too deeply, and the author somehow just misses making that terrific soul yearning real. He is at the same time the product of his Methodist background and heritage and a violent revolt against it. He is as close to nature, as truly a child of nature as Antaeus, who regained his strength seven fold whenever he touched his mother earth. That closeness the author indicates, but does not make convincing as, for instance, Walter de la Mare makes it convincing in "The Memoirs of a Midget."

What she does make vibrant, however, is the effect which love had upon the strange lad. In a sense, from the moment that he saw his love, love made his life. It made his death, too, in as definite a sense. The author does that part of her hero superlatively.

Do not think that "The Methodist Faun" is a sad book. It is sad in the sense that "Seventeen" was sad, and humorous in the same sense.

There is nothing funnier in the world than adolescent love, and nothing more tragically beautiful. It all depends on the point of view. Anne Parrish has succeeded in giving such a panorama of it that the reader sees it with all of its ridiculous panoply of gestures and yearnings and all of its young beauty and loveliness. To some the picture of the Methodist faun showing to the girl he loves—who seems to him an angel sifted down from the stars—the crude paintings which he has made and about which she is trying to be politely encouraging, while his heart shouts at him that she thinks they are terrible—such a picture to some will be so comic that they will smile vociferously. To others it will be tragedy.

That tragic-comic struggle is memorable. The book as a whole, however, is not so good as her previous novels.

THE LITERARY LINCOLNS

This touching photograph of the only father and son literary collaboration since the Alexander Dumases was snapped on the S. S. France twenty minutes before it sailed for the Mediterranean this spring. It records the Lincolns, with Freeman, the son, typing the last words of the manuscript of "Blair's Attic," a swell Cape Cod mystery thriller, Joseph C. (famous Cape Cod author) giving the page before the last a final look-see, and Thomas R. Coward, president of Coward-McCann (publishers), reading the final page as it came from the typewriter.

Walpole Novel Recalls Several of His Others

"Hans Frost" Seems Like Recast Play.

"Hans Frost" by Hugh Walpole. (Doubleday Doran.)

Hugh Walpole has chosen, as the theme of his latest novel, the love a young girl. The old man is England's most distinguished novelist, and the young girl his niece by marriage. The scene is London of the smart social-literary-political group, with the Duchess of Wrexe's coterie and her social ideal mentioned ocasionally.

HUGH WALPOLE.

There are a few Russians to remind readers that Mr. Walpole once wrote passionately about Russia and the Russians. And the niece leaves at the beginning of the book and goes back almost at the end, to Polchester, which we all remember as the scene of Mr. Walpole's "cathedral" novels. There are dogs in it—to remind us of "Hamlet." And there is a horrible old woman in it to remind us of "The Man with Red Hair." "Hans Frost" seems to have a dash of all of the Walpole phases in it.

Unfortunately, that is about all that it does have. It is no more Hugh Walpole at any one of his assorted bests than a lone and lorn robin is a spring. It is, to be entirely frank, the worst of Mr. Walpole's books that this reader has ever read. It simply doesn't, time and time again, come off. It is a picture of the sudden blooming of love in a man of seventy, a spiritual but none the less passionate love, because it finds its expression only in kisses. It is also the picture of the blooming of jealousy and mistrust in his wife and of a sexless adoration in his niece, and of almost vivifying hatred in his wife's old mother.

All of the emotions are clean ones—clean in the sense of having no overgrowths of psychology, clean in the sense that to the observer of them they are plain and unhampered, though violent.

All really primitive emotion is clean in that sense, understandable, explanatory of itself. And all of the emotions which Mr. Walpole pictures are primitive ones. But he treats them as if they were not clean, as if they were dark and mysterious, and they had to be dug out of deep tropical forests of emotions. He should have written a straight, simple unadorned story with the material he had at hand. He has not done it and he has, at times, made the undergrowth even more tangled by dragging a completely alien whimsy into the business. It is a heavy hoofed whimsy, consistent neither with the author nor with the character in the book which indulges in it.

I have decided after years of reading good and bad novels, that there are only two kinds of novels in the world, [besides the very few which show genius] and they are those novels which their authors write because they want to write a novel and those novels which drive their authors into writing them, which have to be written, because those things have to be said. Novels of the latter class always have a reality about them no matter how badly they are done. Novels of the first class never have no matter how skillfully they are carpentered. "Hans Frost" sounds to me like a novel which the author accomplished after he had set himself the task of writing a novel.

The most interesting part of "Hans Frost" is when the hero talks to himself about his work, the best part the occasional glimpse that the reader gets of a great man who knows perfectly well that he isn't, really, great. And one of the best paragraphs: "Everything had been as he would not have it. No book that he had written had been the book that he had wanted to write, no praise that he had ever received . . . had been the praise that he had desired, no criticism [and he had had plenty] had seemed to him to hit the mark [he knew how feeble in many ways all his works had been]. He had not even lived the life that in his youth he had longed for.

BROADWAY INTERLUDE

By ACHMED ABDULLAH and FAITH BALDWIN

MILLING crowds, streams of ever impatient traffic, theatres showing a bold front of blinding, many colored lights — this Broadway is familiar to everyone. But few know that exciting land of Back Stage, the real Broadway, where day in and day out a drama is played that has no name in electric lights. Broadway Interlude, with its romantic Leo Cardoza, its lovely Sally Cameron, and its wily Rita Andrews will admit the veriest novice.

"BROADWAY INTERLUDE is likely to be one of the most discussed books of the season."—United Press

With Poverty Treated as an Adventure.

BY JANET FAIRBANK.
[Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank.]

"Up to Now," by Alfred E. Smith [Viking Press].

The outstanding impression one retains after reading Alfred E. Smith's autobiography, "Up to Now," is of the writer's amazing zest for life. How he loves it, and what fun he has had living it!

When I read Albert Beveridge's "Lincoln" it struck me that the depths of misery and the degradation of poverty he described so convincingly must have engulfed Alfred Smith as it did Abraham Lincoln. Nothing could have been more fantastically incorrect. Al Smith began having a good time the moment he cast a conscious look about him. He would be the last person to admit that there was anything unfortunate in his early life.

Notwithstanding the fact that from the time he was fourteen years old the tenement boy undertook the responsibility of family support, one receives an impression from his account of those early days that the lower east side was nothing less than an enchantment of delight. It is an endearing picture he paints of adolescent New York; swimming in the East river, a limpid stream; roller skating at City Hall park; amateur acting from the time he was a little boy, sometimes in current drama, sometimes in what he calls "home made plays;" volunteering to work with the fire department in the days when the engine, a shining toy in red and gilt, was drawn by four galloping horses.

He tells of:

Tea ships at Market street, where at night by candlelight men led horses up and down the dock, pulling up fragrant chests from the holds of the ships.

Coney Island, a distant lure, only to be reached on some fantastically elaborate political picnic, and people, always people, a swelter of whom the boy Al liked, "FOLKS."

And at the back of the whole genial panorama the great arch of Brooklyn bridge, blotting out the stars by night; a living river by day.

Two extraordinarily stable facts stand out in the shifting drama of Al Smith's younger days. His mother, his father, he himself, his wife, his sister, and his five children were all born within five blocks of one another, and his children, he himself, and his mother all attended St. James' school, the influence of which was a strong and splendid thing in the life of the growing boy. He married when he was twenty-seven years old, and the dominant thing in Alfred Smith's life has been his affection for his family.

The autobiography makes that clear enough: the affairs of his private life are endearingly intertwined with his public responsibilities. Five children were crowded into a few rooms; when their father came up from Albany for a week-end he slept on a sofa. Mrs. Smith washed, ironed, cooked, cared for the children and yet found time to attend meetings where her husband spoke.

"When I had her located as I rose to speak," he says, "I was all right."

On going to Albany as a member of the assembly, he spent his first night away from home in five years. He is frank about that first year, frank and charming. "I was diligent in attendance at meetings, but never knew what was going on all during the session." By working nights at the capitol, he educated himself into comprehension.

Friendliness was Al's weapon, and interest in the welfare of the weak his crusade. The history of his official life in New York is a record of a continuous fight for the people and his summary of the battles restores hope that fighting is worth while.

However, Miss Butcher asked me to write a book review, not political propaganda, and anyhow there isn't space, in a single column, to record Gov. Smith's achievements in legislation, as set forth in his autobiography. The book has great charm, and yet much of it reads like excerpts from a diary. It has no style, save that of perfect clarity. It has no grace of writing, no enhancement of rhetoric. There isn't a smart phrase in it, and, curiously enough, the humor is sometimes not very funny, although it is invariably kindly. It has, however, an amazingly honest quality, and courage of the highest order shines through its pattern, pure gold. One says to one's self, "What a man! What a life! What a country!"

Smith's analyses of other men are interesting. What he says of Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, might well be applied to the writer himself. "He knew all about the struggle of life. He had risen from humble surroundings, and was unquestionably one of the greatest political leaders of recent years. He was a plain, simple-living, straightforward man. He never turned his back on any of the friends who started up the ladder with him. He had an intimate knowledge of men. To know him was to love him."

Book on Arctic Mingles Humor with Its Thrill

Mrs. John Borden Reviews Streeter's Latest.

BY COURTNEY BORDEN.

"An Arctic Rodeo," by Daniel W. Streeter [Putnam].

"To Far Western Alaska," by T. R. Hubback [Scribners].

By the title one is led to believe that "An Artic Rodeo," by Daniel W. Streeter, is a story which has at last completely debunked the Arctic. In a way, I regret that he didn't because if any one could, Mr. Streeter could. He certainly debunked Africa in "Camels" and "Denatured Africa." But after poking much delicious fun, and causing many chuckles on the reader's part, the author suddenly decides to write a perfectly serious and very interesting account of his own trip to the Greenland Arctic. Apparently, not even an able humorist can escape the pathos connected with those humble and courageous white men and women who are scattered in that far northern part of the globe.

D. W. STREETER.

And Mr. Streeter has such a nice human feeling about those same people. For instance, when the Morissey drops anchor at Thule, an isolated trading post the expedition meets Hans and Nette working there in the service of the Danish government. To Hans and Nette, who are engaged to be married, they must break the news that they have brought no relief manager; and no other vessel would call that summer. Another long, dark winter! "With a philosophy bred of long solitary years in this land of sudden, unexpected twists of fortune, they closed their ears to the sounds of the wedding bells, put away their visions and hoped for the best. George presented them with an apple apiece. It was the first Hans had tasted for six years—he seemed momentarily almost to forget the tragedy of the postponed nuptials."

But the fun and easy humor predominate. Gastronomical frailties in regard to seasickness [when pertaining to other people] always get a laugh. For hearty enjoyment, nothing could excel Mr. Streeter's description of his first walrus hunt. These Alice in Wonderland beasts he claims "looked like three corpulent roués stretched out on the marble slab of a Turkish bath."

"An Arctic Rodeo" is well worth reading. It is an easy way to digest real information concerning people and regions arctic, mixed with plenty of laughter.

Other hunters' experiences are always worth reading. Mr. Hubback trekked over little known territory along the Kuskokwim river, Alaska. Among the specimens he took for various museums were brown bear, mountain sheep, moose, and caribou. For any one interested in Alaska or in hunting big game the book would be interesting.

THE VIKING PRESS announces a volume of first importance, a notable addition to the shelf of American biography. It is a life story intimately bound up with the most important men and events of our times. It depicts dramatically and vividly the growth of a great city and the phenomenal rise to fame of a man who came to be the voice of that city. More than the important views of an important man, it is the record of an exciting and essentially American life.

UP TO NOW
An Autobiography by ALFRED E. SMITH

Alfred E. Smith has once more given evidence of his courage to tell the facts. In this volume, filled with new and sensational material which did not appear when it was running serially and which has never been set down heretofore, he tells the whole story of his life from the boyhood days on the East side of New York through the Presidential campaign of 1928.

The foremost figures of our time are presented; party policies are discussed; political crises and issues—including those extraneous vexing problems which force themselves into an election campaign—are faced with the courageous and humane outlook that won for the former Governor the title of "the happy warrior."

Photographs, many of which have never appeared before, illustrate every stage of the colorful story.

THE HAWK

By ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS.

Douglas Dorling, a young British peer, is sent to Dartmoor prison on the perjured testimony of Cora Sefton, an unscrupulous woman in love with him. In revenge, because he repulsed her advances, she swears she saw him kill a policeman in a night club raid. Dorling is a famous aviator, but to keep this knowledge from his mother and spare her pain, he has been using the assumed name of Douglas Harris; and as Douglas Harris he was tried and convicted.

He is rescued from prison in spectacular fashion, right under the eyes of his guard, by persons unknown; is shaved, dressed in new clothes, and driven to the Gunter hotel, where, to his amazement, he is greeted by Cora. She has registered as his wife.

Cecily Warren, the girl Douglas loves, is also staying at the Gunter. She sees Dorling arrive with Cora on his arrival and jumps to the conclusion he must be secretly married. Disillusioned and heartbroken, she leaves for London.

Douglas meets his father's old friend, Sir Aylmer Granston in the lobby and accepts an invitation to drive to London. He escapes from Cora, leaving a note. Immediately upon arrival Jabez Malleran, well known amateur connoisseur of the arts and a neighbor of the Granstons, As Malleran is decoding the wire, Martha Ferralle, Cecily's maid calls. Martha is seriously in his employ. He directs her to bring her mistress within a few days to Mortvaig, called Mortvaig, in Scotland.

That night, while Dorling is dining with the Granstons, Malleran calls. Later Cecily calls, not knowing Doug is there. She greets him frigidly, and creates a sensation by telling the hears he is married.

Martha goes to see Cora and asks her to explain all the mystery. She refuses, but tells her she is to go to Mortvaig, Scotland, to meet her chief. He agrees, but first visits his father at Dorling Towers. Cecily's father, Charles Warren, who lives on the fringe of the Granston estate, calls and remarks casually that his daughter has taken a job furnishing apartments for millionaire's house. Doug is struck by the coincidence in names.

At Mortvaig Doug can only learn that, in return for his freedom, he is being blackmailed into a mysterious service, as an airplane pilot. He takes off for his first trip, unaware Cecily is on board, drugged.

Charles Warren, who is in the government secret service, though this is not known to his friends, takes a holiday at home. Detective Inspector Rason of Scotland Yard arrives for a conference. He believes Harris' escape from prison was a carefully planned one, and tells it with a gang of smugglers whom he and Warren are pursuing. He has traced the van in which Doug was rescued to a London furniture company. Warren says the company sent Cecily to Scotland. Rason suspects trouble, and wires the Mortvaig police.

Arriving at his island base, Doug is shown about by another pilot, Lieut. Beresford. On his return to Mortvaig he is permitted to go down to London for a few days and he tries to shake himself free of the gang. He calls on Cecily to explain everything to her, but is told by Mr. Warren that Cecily has disappeared from Mortvaig. Her maid returns without her and could shed no light on the disappearance. When Douglas sees the maid he remembers that he had seen her at the Mortvaig airdrome and suspects she is one of the gang. With a shock he realizes that he must have carried Cecily to the island and that she is being kept a prisoner there by the chief. He decides to escape at once, but he does not tell Mr. Warren of his suspicions.

Warren is surprised at the return of his daughter and greatly to his surprise he is also pleased to see her.

Douglas arranges for her escape and manages to land her in England. He is pursued by a stranger, however. He flies inland, then heading the plane again toward the sea he bails out in a parachute. His plane is shot down in flames and Douglas Harris is presumed dead. He hurries to London expecting to see Cecily but is amazed to learn that in spite of his plans miscarried and that she has again been captured by the gang.

Failing to obtain news of Cecily, Dorling, at Cora's request, meets her at a night club. He is drugged and wakes up the next day on a boat at sea. Cecily is also on board. There is something very peculiar about the boat and its passengers. The captain allows Dorling to use the small seaplane carried by the boat. The fuel gauge registers a full load, but in reality there is not half enough fuel to carry him to land. He sees a navy plane comes down on the sea and requests to be taken aboard. He explains to the commander of the boat and they go to Cecily's rescue.

INSTALLMENT XLII.

NO MORAL OBLIGATION.

Standing in the corridor were two blue jackets. That, in itself, was a decidedly unusual sight. Further, the door of Warren's flat was open. Warren himself was apparently being embraced by his daughter while just inside the doorway was the man whom Malleron had believed dead, next to him an officer of the royal air force.

Cecily Warren was saying: "Poor old daddy—you've been worrying your head off, I expect. That's the one thing that spoiled it for me. You've no idea how thrilling it is to be kidnaped," her light tone concealing the depths of emotion.

"If you're really and truly pleased to see me back, you must thank Douglas," Cecily was saying. "I don't know how he got mixed up in it all but he was."

"Nothing in it, sir!" muttered Dorling.

Malleron observed that the officer had kept his hat on—and recognized it as a symbol that he was on duty. Warren was turning to Dorling when he noticed Malleron, whereupon the latter stepped forward and took Cecily by the hand.

"Miss Warren, let me be the first outsider to congratulate you—and my old friend here." With his other hand he touched Dorling. For the moment he dominated the assembly, himself the very spirit of benevolence.

He may turn out to be a grave nuisance to you, suggested Warren.

"Excuse me, sir."

It was Wrexford, the flying officer, who spoke to Warren.

"Oh! Ah! Cecily, my dear, you have not introduced this gentleman."

"Mr. Wrexford, father, who escorted us here in case we should all get kidnaped over again."

The lieutenant saluted and then shook hands with Warren.

"My orders are to ask whether you can identify this gentleman, Mr. Warren."

"Who? Lord Dorling, do you mean? . . . My dear sir, I have known him since he was a baby. I assure you that I know of my own certain knowledge that his name really is Dorling and that a year or two ago, on the death of his father, he succeeded to the title."

"Some formality, no doubt," interposed Malleron. "I can add my testimony, Mr. Wrexford. I know this gentleman to be Lord Dorling. It is very surprising that there should be any question of his identity."

"Thank you," said the lieutenant crisply. He turned to Dorling. "Lord Dorling, I have to apologize for my mistake."

Wrexford ignored the outstretched hand, saluted and promptly left the flat. The extraordinary abruptness of his behavior left the others speechless.

"What a very military young man!" said Cecily with a nervous laugh. "Something must have upset him. He was quite amiable on the journey."

"He looked to me as if he were unconvinced of the young man's identity," replied Malleron.

"Cecily, my dear, you must tell me all that happened in a little while. But the present Mr. Malleron has come to see me on business."

"Right-ho! I'll go and tidy up. Don't run away, Douglas. I'll join you in a few minutes. I've tons to talk about."

"My business will wait, my dear Warren. May I suggest that the three of us continue the very interesting conversation we had the other afternoon."

A moment later the three of them were in the study. At the risk of a breach of good taste, Malleron intended to keep the strings in his own hand.

"It is not primarily my affair, Warren, but I wonder if you would allow me to speak first before the issue becomes confused in my thoughts."

Warren nodded. The man who was virtually head of the secret service—who could count instantly upon the coöperation of all the forces of the crown was in his own person the least assertive of men. If Malleron had something to say by all means let him say it.

Malleron slowly lowered himself into an armchair while he took a rapid survey of the situation. Young Dorling, of course, believed that that chart was the course from Mortvaig to the island was at his bank. A dummy must have been replaced, so for Malleron there was no anxiety on that score.

"In our last little discussion, Lord Dorling, you were about to offer a bribe to these—traffickers. You were to hand them a chart in return for Miss Warren's safety. Now that Miss Warren is safe I presume you intend to keep your bargain with them—and return the chart."

"Nothing of the kind!" answered Dorling. "I offered them a bargain instead of accepting it they shanghaied me and put me on that ship. Instead of accepting it they shanghaied me and put me on that ship. By a mixture of good luck and good management I got hold of the destroyer and took Miss Warren off that way. There was no bargain whatever."

"Indeed!" crooned Malleron. "This, my dear Warren, is a great deal better than we dared to hope. Lord Dorling has now no moral obligation in the matter. He can tell us all he knows of their activities—where their aircraft base—where they pick up their commodity—without breaking faith."

"It isn't as easy as that," cut in Dorling. "I am all in favor of stopping the spy, naturally—but it is a little difficult to play the spy."

"I can see his point of view," put in Warren. "He is in a very awkward position. He was made to cast in his lot with these fellows to a limited extent against his will. Obviously, he doesn't like handing them over."

There was a kindly sympathy in his voice. It was as if for the moment he had forgotten his duty and remembered only that this man, doubtless at the risk of his own life, had rescued Cecily.

"The most difficult position in the world," agreed Malleron emphatically. "The case of evils, Lord Dorling. That young officer, for example—he struck me as a man convinced against his will."

"He was the feller who arrested me at Redrorn. He thought he had mistaken identity."

"He may turn out to be a grave nuisance to you," suggested Warren. "I don't quite see how we are going to deal with it—if he goes to the police. I won't promise anything—but we might be able to get you out of the country."

"If we come to terms," finished Dorling bitterly. "I quite understand, Warren. If I don't betray the gang you put me back in Dartmoor. If I betray them they put me back—unless you succeed in smuggling me out of the country."

Ann Harding Scores Again in This Talkie

THE CAST.

Vera Kessler	Ann Harding
Judge Kessler	Harry Bannister
Carl Weild	John Loder
Julia Sturm	Kay Hammond
Michael Sturm	Arthur Hoyt
Dr. Zeigler	William Oriamond
Arnold Hartmann	Lawford Davidson
Grimm	Elmer Ballard
District Attorney	Frank Reicher

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

Assisted by an able cast, fortified by skillful direction and photography, she presents to you on the State-Lake screen the problems of Mrs. Judge Kessler, victim of a blackmailer.

The hound in question is a man for whom, under Italian skies, she had once experienced an infatuation. Though, you are led to believe, the affair had been innocent enough the lady had been so indiscreet as to take her pen in hand with the result that Mr. Hartmann holds letters which Mrs. Kessler would not for anything in the world have brought to the notice of her husband.

So, she pays and pays. Fear, death and tragedy stalk her. And that's what the picture's about.

"Her Private Affairs" is credible and effective. Locale is England and the courtroom scenes are most interesting. Why, I ask you, don't we doll our judges and lawyers up the way they do in Britain? Their robes and caps DO make the learned gentlemen of this picture so easy to look at!

Miss Harding's portrayal of the lovely, hag-ridden heroine is a sincere and convincing one. Elmer Ballard contributes the next best bit as the shell-shocked valet of the villain. Villain is smoothly and nastily impersonated by Lawford Davidson. Harry Bannister as Judge Kessler and John Loder as a barrister and loyal friend of the Kesslers are splendid.

The production is elegantly assembled and this is its message to a world of women:

If you have something to say—
Fond, fierce, or just trite—
To a man—why, SAY it, Ma'am!

Directed by Jean de Limur.

THE CAST.

Yvonne	Jeanne Eagels
Pierre	Frederic March
Rigaud	Halliwell Hobbes
Renee	Blanche Le Clair
Clement	Henry Daniell
Charlotte	Hilda Moore

I ran out to the Diversey theater to see "Jealousy" because I thought you would want a report on the last picture made by the late Jeanne Eagels.

It is not, one regrets to say, a successful photoplay. It is draggy and far from convincingly acted. Miss Eagels was miscast in the rôle of Yvonne and apparently realized the fact, for her performance is artificial and forced. Those supporting her are more happily cast—but nobody rings the bell. Direction, undoubtedly, is somewhat at fault.

The picture is an adaptation of the fascinating stage play — which employed just one set and two players—and tells the story of tragedy attendant on the intense jealousy of one Pierre for his wife Yvonne. The film narrative is much like the original, though it presents added sets and actors.

See you tomorrow!

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. George T. Ely, 344 North Lockwood avenue, was awarded $5.

The Question.

The Answers.

Nate Sanders, New York City, salesman.—His visit gives every indication of closer relations henceforth between the two nations. England did a smart thing by sending MacDonald. Fortunately, we have a good man in President Hoover to look after our side.

Mrs. Marie Strafford, 1057 Thorndale avenue, housewife. — One cannot help but admire Prime Minister MacDonald, and it would seem from everything we read that his visit has been very successful for both countries.

Peaceful agreements between England and the United States, or rather America, for this includes Canada, will do much towards peace throughout the world.

T. M. Stewart, 746 Prairie avenue, Glen Ellyn, salesman. —The prime minister's visit to this country undoubtedly will do much to bring about lasting peace, not only between our nation but all nations. He is setting nations thinking along the right line—profitable peace compared with destructive war.

Miss Janet Caldwell, 6245 Kenwood avenue, secretary.—It certainly is a good thing, a step in the right direction. The tendency these days is toward world peace and a better understanding between nations. We usually get what we aim for, if the nations would work sincerely for peace.

M. J. Sporrer, 1412 Edison building, auditor.—His mission here probably is the greatest step yet taken towards a mutual understanding of conditions in the respective countries. It should be the basis for a closer union of America and England—a most desirable thing.

'Carmen' Wins With Its Scenes, Songs as Well

American Opera Shows Gain in Year.

"CARMEN."

Opera by Bizet. Sung to the English adaptation of Helene Mullins and Robert A. Simon by the American Opera company at the Majestic theater Oct. 11, 1929. The cast:

Carmen	Bettina Hall
Don Jose	Charles Hedley
Escamillo	Willard Schindler
Zuniga	Peter Chambers
Morales	John Uppman
Micaela	Nancy McCord
El Remendado	Frederic Roberts
Dancairo	Tom Williams
Mercedes	Helen Golden
Frasquite	Margaret Everett
Spanish Dancer	Winifred Goldsborough
Conductor	Isaac Van Grove

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The first impression in the performance of this, the finest opera of its kind ever written, is ocular. The scenery and most of the costumes have been revised and edited, and they are about three times as good as they used to be, still retaining a slightly fantastic air, but with the artiness that afflicted them in past seasons effectively blue penciled out.

The second impression is aural. Somehow improvement in performance has gone hand in hand with improvement in setting.

It must be true, as this company demonstrates, that if you catch your musical artists young enough you can do almost anything with them. Certainly these singers are young. They offer triumphant proof that "Carmen" is distinctly not a dream of the middle-aged, and it is well in considering the work not to forget that reasonably important fact.

Being young, they are alert and responsive, but it does not always follow, as it does in this case, that they are refreshingly free from awkwardness and self-consciousness. Best of all, they would seem not to be in the least contented with getting a performance set in a mold once it is learned. Instead, they go on improving it.

Miss Bettina Hall, for instance, was a girlish, good looking, and tuneful Carmen when she sang that rôle a year ago. She was all of these last night, but in addition she had found out how to mix a little poison in the portrayal of the graceless young hussy. She knew how to purr most engagingly, but she also knew how to claw, and her clawing went deep. She, in case you have missed the connection, is a sister of Natalie Hall, who made a hit in the leading women's rôles of "Faust" and "Yolanda of Cyprus" earlier in the week. They are a mezzo-soprano and soprano pair well worth your attention.

Mr. Hedley's voice has taken on firmness of texture, which was the chief thing he needed a year ago. His Don Jose, therefore, is now an engaging performance. There were newcomers in the cast: Mr. Schindler, an ornamental, suave, and greatly applauded Escamillo, and Miss McCord, whose light but charming voice was pure delight in the music of Micaela, in both the duet of the first act and the solo of the third.

The piece is staged remarkably cleverly. The first act, instead of the customary public square, is an inclosed courtyard with doors and windows to be used by cast and chorus. The second is a compact little tavern room; the third a cave, and so on. Here the participants wander in and out, apparently quite casually, but really with not the slightest trace of haphazardness. Once again is seen the importance of connecting bodily movement with musical rhythm, one of the first points in Mr. Rosing's creed.

The orchestra did the best job of the week. Not as large as the customary operatic orchestra, it is an extremely able body, with color, good tone, and accuracy. Last night it took on an extra surge of enthusiasm from Mr. Van Grove's baton. For that matter, so did the singers on the stage.

BLAMES SUN STORMS FOR MANY RADIO TROUBLES ON EARTH

Delaware, O., Oct. 11.—A storm of marked intensity is raging on the sun according to a report issued from the Perkins observatory at Ohio Wesleyan university here by Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, director of the observatory. He predicts this month will be marked by solar activity.

Dr. Stetson recently came to Ohio Wesleyan from Harvard university and made a specialty of investigating solar phenomena and in coöperation with Mr. Greenleaf Pickard, engineer of the Wireless Specialty company of Boston, he has found that the solar storms have remarkable effect on radio reception and are doubtless responsible for many terrestrial disturbances not yet fully understood. Daily the huge telescope at Perkins observatory is directed to the sun and a careful study made of these gigantic solar disturbances which accompany what are popularly known as sun spots.

The storm center just announced covers an area of more than 450,000,000 square miles and is in reality a terrific cyclone of gases caught in a whirl which would make a Florida hurricane appear infinitesimal in comparison, Dr. Stetson states.

Johns Hopkins Reaches for Exceptional Chemistry Students

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 11.—(AP)—At Johns Hopkins university today there was dedicated the Francis P. Garvan chair of chemical education and the inauguration of a national fellowship plan.

Francis P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation, New Yok, endowed the chair. That and the fellowship project mark the realization by chemical industries and friends of chemistry of the need for training able students to carry on future research work.

"There is the conviction that the hope of the future advancement in science," Dr. Joseph S. Ames, president of the university, said, "lies not in the average student of today, but in the student of exceptional ability and character. Our educational system must include some provision for complete utilization of the unusually gifted student."

There ultimately will be a fellowship for each state in the Union, but now there are but nineteen scholarships available, given by industrial concerns, research foundations, and individuals. Nine students, picked for their past records and the promise of developing their ability, have started on the four year training period. After that they may select teaching or industrial research as their profession.

That the plan to produce first class chemists may become international in scope was indicated by Dr. W. A. Patrick of the chemistry faculty. He expressed the desire to honor his former instructor, Prof. F. G. Donnan of University college, London, by establishing a fellowship in his name. Announcement of the fellowship awaits Prof. Donnan's permission.

Dr. Neil Gordon was the first holder of the Garvan chair. Gifts totaling a half million dollars, including $40,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, to constitute the nucleus fund to be devoted to pioneering work in the training of America's future chemists and professors of chemistry, were acknowledged formally by the university at the dedication.

Shaw Recalls Gay 90's When He Was a Critic

Admits Writing of Plays Pays More Cash.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Bernard Shaw today broke one of his strict rules—never to have anything to do with dramatic critics—by going boldly as the chief guest to the annual luncheon of the Critics Circle. He attended as a former critic. He told how he happened to become a critic. T. P. O'Connor, he said, made him a musical critic more than forty years ago because what he had written up to that time on other subjects was ruining O'Connor's paper.

The most vivid reminder of Shaw's present job was in the personnel of the men and women at the tables. Among the guests were enough actors and actresses, who had appeared in Shaw plays, to make up the casts of all of his productions.

Next to Shaw as the luncheon hero was R. C. Sherriff, author of "Journeys End." He said that when the fate of his play was hanging in the balance, a year ago last summer, he was advised to send the manuscript to Shaw to get an opinion.

"I sat up all night making a nice copy of the play," Sherriff told, "and the next day I saw a picture of Shaw in swimming in France. I went to a great expense to get a lot of French stamps in London for return postage, and before I could send the manuscript I saw another newspaper picture showing Shaw in Switzerland. I spent another day collecting uncanceled Swiss stamps in London philatelic shops and sent off the manuscript. The next day I saw in a newspaper a third picture of Shaw with one arm in a sling because he had been bitten by a mosquito.

"Then I was hopeless, for I knew he would carelessly turn the leaves of my manuscript with one hand, doing two or three pages at a time and missing my best lines. But he didn't. He wrote me a good letter telling me not to burn down my house to roast my pig."

St. John Ervine, president of the Critics' circle, was toastmaster. In introducing Shaw he said all members of the dramatic critic craft could be divided into three groups—"critics, reporters, and Hannen Swaffer."

"I used to be a critic," Shaw began. "I still regard it as one of the professions I keep in reserve. I gave it up because the profession of playwright, which I adopted, is very much easier, very much more illustrious, and much more attractively remunerative. You'll notice I didn't say it was better paid. After all, a critic's payment was modest. When I was in the first flight I only got six pounds a week, and that is as much as I ever got, but it was regular and one got a forty years' engagement. I would like to see an actor who would not take any salary on earth if he could get forty years' engagement.

"Now, I was a critic in those glorious times, now spoken of with enthusiastic admiration, especially by younger members, as the glorious nineties, the great days of those wonderful critics, Archer and Walkley, Clement Scott Thomas, Joe Nye and so on. I sat with those men on first nights and was one of them, and I find that a writer the other day in a Liverpool paper, commenting on the reception of my last play, said, 'O, what would the criticisms have been like in the really golden palmy days of dramatic criticism? Think of what Archer would have written about it. Think of what Walkley would have written about it.'

"Well, I do think and I am rather glad; well, I cannot say I am glad two very affectionate friends of mine are dead but, still, there it is.

"I do feel called upon as a survivor from that time to tell you that dramatic criticism today is not worse than criticism of that time. It couldn't be. After all, there are limits to what can be done by incompetence, by ignorance, by carelessness, by the irresponsible, who, in those old days several times a week reached those limits cheerfully. You may try as hard as you like, you can get no further."

After Care of the Permanent Is Most Important

Some women have no after effects from a permanent wave, unless those of the pleasant awareness that they're ready on a moment's notice for a last minute invitation. Others need a special program of after care. And upon the faithfulness with which this course is pursued depends the success of your permanent.

For excessively oily hair the permanent is a godsend. For a time, at least, after the operation there is surcease from the discomforts of a too active oily scalp. But even under these circumstances, depending upon the inefficiency of the permanent wave operator and the heat used during the process of waving, there may accrue such discomforts as are known to less oily haired persons. It is doubtful, however, if one's hair ever becomes so brittle as that of her opposite after an inexpert treatment.

I speak of inefficiency of operators because it is reasonable to believe that in a profession where such a comparatively short training period is demanded inexpert, or shall we say experimental, work is done. Also, another reason is that the competition in this kind of work has become so keen of recent years and months that the price cutting barely permits the highest grade of work.

As with dyeing, I certainly believe in choosing as expert a hair waving operator as can be obtained. Economy might better be practiced on the frock or the jewelry or something else to be worn with the wave.

After a permanent, however, no matter how expertly given, almost every type of scalp needs a warm olive oil treatment before each shampoo. Part the hair, rub the warm olive oil thoroughly into the scalp, repeating the parting and rubbing until the entire scalp is treated. It is better if you can leave the oil on all night and shampoo in the morning. A bathing cap or an old towel can be used for pillow protection. Otherwise, leave it on for an hour before the shampoo.

The great advantage of a permanent over a marcel is that you can brush your hair thoroughly, and this is exactly what you should do after your permanent.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

T. H.: WHEN THE FEET PERspire freely, hot water may be used, but it should be followed immediately by cold water to close the pores again. Pouring cold water into the bathtub over the feet will do it. This foot treatment is also recommended for any one suffering from insomnia or headache. It draws the blood from the brain.

ADDIE J.: FLABBY BUSTS should be bathed daily with cold salt water. Support the tissues with a suitable brassiere, even at night. When the tissues are thus supported the circulation through the parts becomes more normal and the structures become healthier. At night, massage gently for ten or fifteen minutes with cocoa butter. Exercises for reducing the bust may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

When Azalea and her fiancé are out he just can't keep his eyes off other girls. And if you think that is entertainment for the girl you're out with, gentlemen, you don't know a beautiful girl's mind! Azalea is all of that. She could get men to stare at her, too, without any trouble, but she isn't that kind of girl, and, besides, this fiancé of hers and his philandering orbs require her full attention.

He's handsome, so the girls can't exactly be blamed for giving him the well known once over. Azalea admits that, herself. But what, she wonders, does the future hold for a girl who, now young and beautiful, can't hold her fiancé's sole attention? What will his actions be when they are married several years and she is getting old, Azalea would like to know. He never speaks to the girls, it is true. But he looks at them if they are attractive, and they glance at him first.

Observing the better part of wisdom, Azalea hasn't spoken to her beau about it yet—but the day will come when she will risk being thought jealous, which she says she isn't a bit, and tell the financé which way his eyes should turn.

There's always the consoling thought for the poor victim of a fiancé's wandering eye, viz: he does seem to prefer her to the others, or why would he keep on taking her out? And that ought to take the razor edge off the fangs of jealousy, don't you think? They're terribly hard to file down, we know.

A girl, a natural born victim to jealousy, should not choose as a fiancé such an agreeable eye rest for other women, however. She ought to pick a homely man. But even that wouldn't cure her. Nothing outside the victim herself influences the vice for better or worse. It's one of those things against which you have to carry on a one man fight.

Azalea says there is another young man who wants to marry her. He is not so good looking, but when she did happen to be out with him he gave her all his attention. But a girl who can't stand eyes that aren't turned on her every minute makes those eyes so tired of looking at her they'll just naturally take to looking away later.

A total of $74,149 has been raised during the last week in the Salvation Army's home service appeal, workers attending the daily noonday meeting in the Hotel Sherman, announced yesterday. This exceeds the sum raised in the same period in last year's drive by $27,031.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Hoover received the members of the American Dental Assistants' association and the members of the Dental Hygiene association this morning in the White House. They are here as a part of the dentists' convention held here this week.

The British ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard and the latter's cousin and secretary, Miss Gytha Stourton, are in New York, from where the first named will sail for the West Indies, where he spent many of his younger years. Lady Isabella and Miss Stourton will remain in New York for ten days or more.

Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Morse of Chicago spent this week at the Hotel Grafton and have been entertained almost constantly by old friends, and friends of the former's brother, Dr. E. E. Morse of Washington, gave a dinner in their honor last night.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, president of the Woman's Democratic club of the District of Columbia, has purchased the famous old historic place known as the "Lightfoot place," on the reservoir road above Georgetown, near the superb estate of Mrs. Anne Archbold. Mrs. Harriman has lived for many years in one of the historic houses on F street in the "West End," which she sold recently to Myron Hofer of New York. She is staying at the Woman's Democratic club until the repairs and improvements to her new place are completed.

Mr. and Mrs. McClure Kelley have joined the former's mother, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, formerly of Chicago, in her city home, after spending the summer in her country place, The Knoll, near Washington, where their tiny daughter, Joyce, was born a few days ago. They will remain with Mrs. Kelley this winter.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 11.—Florence Hagie Ruthven, wife of the University of Michigan's new president, hopes she will be able to gain the confidence of the students. For that purpose she will give frequent teas for the undergraduates. She spoke of the wife of Clarence Cook Little, who resigned as president of the university, saying Mrs. Little "set a lovely example of simplicity in entertaining."

Mrs. Ruthven, a doctor's daughter, has lived in university towns all her life. She was born in Albion, Mich., and came to Ann Arbor in 1899. She and Mr. Ruthven were married in 1907. They have three children, Katherine Lenora, Alexander Peter, and Bryant Walker. Katherine, who is 21 years old, is the eldest, a senior in the university and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Peter is a sophomore.

The Ruthvens' present home is near the edge of town, on a private drive and almost in a forest of trees. The home for the president is on the campus.

Fritz Leiber Arrives to Open Shakespeare Theater Here Nov. 11

Fritz Leiber, Shakespearean actor for the last quarter century, has arrived to begin his work as director of the newly organized Chicago Civic Shakespeare society and to aid those Chicagoans who plan to create the nation's center for Shakespearean drama in Chicago. He expressed the opinion that the "talkies" will benefit the regular stage, while the silent movies were injurious to it.

"There are more plays of Shakespeare produced in Germany than in the writer's own England," Mr. Leiber declared, "and certainly much more than in America. To my knowledge, Chicago's will become the first such theater in this country."

About 26 regular players will arrive on Sunday, ready for the rehearsing which will start the following day. The season will open on Nov. 11 in the new Chicago Civic Opera building. After a twelve weeks' season the society's cast will go on a tour as a Chicago company.

Unitarians Will Meet Here October 15 to 17

The biennial meeting of the American Unitarian association will be held in Chicago Oct. 15-17 with hundreds of delegates from the United States and Canada. Headquarters will be at the Drake hotel.

The laying of the corner stone of the new First Unitarian church, Woodlawn avenue and East 57th street, and breaking ground for the new library and administration building of the Meadville Theological seminary located near the University of Chicago, will form a part of the conference program. Dr. Sydney S. Snow will be inaugurated as president of the seminary, the address to be given by Dr. Charles E. Park of Boston.

Among the speakers will be Sidney Hillman, general secretary of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, Dr. Anna Garlin Spencer, New York, Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of the Christian Century, and Dr. Albert G. Dieffenbach, editor of the Christian Register. Dr. Louis C. Cornish, Boston, is president of the association.

WEDDING

The marriage of Miss Barbara Farr, daughter of Mrs. Marvin A. Farr of 4737 Woodlawn avenue, to Ronald J. Chinnock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Chinnock of Grand Rapids, Mich., will take place at 4:30 this afternoon at Kenwood church. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's mother. Miss Mary Harts will be Miss Farr's only attendant.

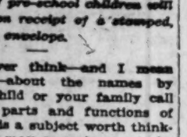
Child Should Know the Correct Terms for Parts of Body



By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bowans

A "Play Booklet," by Mrs. Bowans for mothers of pre-school children will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Did you ever think—and I mean really think—about the names by which your child or your family call the different parts and functions of the body? It is a subject worth thinking about. It may seem to you to be taking seriously a matter of slight moment. But this is not the case.

There are roughly, it seems to me, four different sets or sorts of names for the different parts of the body.

There are the baby names—the names the baby invents or which he mispronounces and which are taken up and used for years. These are often amusing or quaint or cunning.

There are the names which the family has used for years—or perhaps generations. A family code, I suppose we might call it, because those outside the family don't easily recognize the meaning of the words.

There are the street terms. These are recognizable to some of us who have seen them inscribed on walls and sidewalks, or who have heard them because of early contacts with children who use them, or who have taught or done social work. They are often used with vulgar or obscene intentions, but sometimes used only because the children have no other nomenclature. Some of them may be found in classic old English, but as they have an unpleasant connotation to us, that cannot recommend them nor make us want to incorporate them in our speech.

Last, there are the correct terms, the scientific or anatomical names. These are the names the doctor uses—the nurse—and many parents. They are also the names that the intelligent, well informed adult uses.

Now that you are thinking about it, which vocabulary do you want your child to use? Which seems most wholesome, most dignified? When he says to you "What is this part of my body called, Mother—or Daddy?" which name of the four vocabularies will you choose from? Or perhaps you evade naming some parts of his body because you believe that's best.

Suppose your child says, "Mother, what is this bone called?" You answer, "Thigh bone." If he says, "What is the colored part of my eye called?" you say promptly, "Iris." When he asks you this or that you answer readily, "The groin, or tendon of Achilles [perhaps telling him the Greek myth], or the eyebrow, or the kneepan." Are you as well informed and as ready and as casual when he asks you the names of the organs of sex or the excretory organs? It is his right and his protection to know the correct names for the parts and functions of his body, that the body may be in every part as dignified yet as matter of fact as possible. Incidentally do you know these names?

If any parents are sufficiently interested to go into the subject further and to know a correct vocabulary, helpful information will be given if they will write in in the usual way.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S AND MISSES' DRESS.

The front and back panel combine with the snugly shirred side sections to create slenderness in this smart daytime frock, and slenderness is one of the points most to be desired in a dress today. The interesting band at the center front is cut in one with the rever facing. Two surfaces of crêpe satin, wool crepe, transparent velvet, faille crepe or wool jersey are smart materials.

The pattern, 2,848, comes in sizes 18 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 40 inch material.

Could Have Been Worse.

My husband and I were invited to his mother's home for dinner. She served us corned beef and cabbage. I was the only one who liked vinegar on cabbage, so I went to the cabinet for it. I poured the vinegar on the cabbage, and before I could taste it most of the guests began sniffing.

Soon my mother-in-law laughed heartily as she realized my mistake. I had taken a bottled labeled vinegar, but it really contained wine which was fully ten years old. A. A.

TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Recommending Cook Books.

At this season many requests come in for help in choosing one cook book. I wish everybody wanted cook books, instead of just one. It is hard to recommend one book, although I do usually mention one that is late, comprehensive, and sound, but to my mind too much like a mere manual. Just now it has occurred to me that we all like picture books, no matter how old we are. The best text books on cooking have pictures, and many of them, so why not recommend them to those who write and tell me they are at the bottom of the ladder?

"A Text Book of Cooking," by Carlotta Greer, is not new, for its copyright date is 1915, but it is a book to recommend, especially if one is not up on the very latest text books, and I am not. The frontispiece is a picture of Washington's kitchen at Mount Vernon, but the following 89 illustrations are of stoves, utensils, cuts of meat, and all that.

Five years later Miss Greer put out "School and Home Cooking"—both of these are published by Allyn and Bacon—which contains ninety-four illustrations and a list of ninety-five experiments. The first statement in the first book is this eminently true one: "Skill in cooking is not only dependent upon much practice in the actual process of cooking but upon the exercise of the powers of observation and reasoning." Once upon a time I saw some young women—about seventeen—who had made bread one thousand times, demonstrate the business with a fineness of detail that could only come through exercise of these powers.

This is not to discourage the girl who has the will, but not the knowledge, to undertake cooking, but it is to discourage those who think that they can, without any discipline at all, produce just the same effects I, for instance, could get with a recipe. Not a few of the letters I get do show just that idea. That is why these text books, which have recipes enough, ought to be better for them than cooking manuals which give no directions which develop the powers of observation and reasoning.

FARM AND GARDEN

BY PAUL POTTER

Woodford county, Ill., farm women had a good little source of "pin money" until their husbands found out how well the chickens were paying. Now these husbands have taken over most of the poultry work from their wives, according to a report by H. H. Alp, poultry extension specialist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Last year 17 farm flock owners in Woodford county co-operated with the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, in handling their flocks as demonstrations of recommended methods in feeding and management. As is usual in the case of the farm poultry flock, most of the work was done by the women folk. The 17 coöperators made an average net profit of $1.77 a hen for the year.

This year there are 23 Woodford county coöperators in the college's poultry project. Recently when Alp visited them to check up on their progress, he found that the men folk had suddenly become interested in the poultry. On all but one of the 23 farms it was the farmer himself who met Alp, took him around to look at the poultry, and asked the most questions, he reported.

"Not only were these men interested; they were doing the work which is a man's job to do. Many homemade feeders were being used, chick roosts had been built, houses moved and poultry grounds plowed. Perhaps it was the profits which got the men interested. One thing is certain in trying to make money from poultry, it is a big help to have both the women and men taking an active interest."

Little Red Jersey Frock Comes Into Own

BY LOLITA.

New York.—[Special Correspondence]—The little red school dress is beginning to have all the prestige of the little red school house. Especially, if that same little red dress be of jersey. For never before has jersey been stressed before to such an extent for wearers of all ages. By itself or as part of an ensemble, the jersey frock is going to form a winter residence for many of us.

The above model was designed for the girl of from 8 to 14 and it shows you how much may be done with fine plaits in making any juvenile mode distinctive. For these plaits do not follow any orthodox schedule. Far from it. They form on the front of the bodice all sorts of interesting geometric motifs and in the back they simulate a bolero. The collar and cuffs are of white pique and to the former is added a tie of black grosgrain ribbon. The belt is of black leather.

Nor is this type of red frock impractical for school wear. No, for it is the very dark dahlia red popular this year and it withstands many of the tests of youthful spirits which could not be sustained by the lighter tones of this shade.

Nor is the little red dress limited to the growing girl. Look over many of the ensembles just come to us from Paris and you will be surprised at the extent to which red figures for the basic garment. For instance, a formal ensemble from Patou includes a [illegible] of brilliant red crepe with a coat of black satin trimmed with black Persian lamb. Similarly, for sports wear one finds in connection with a [illegible] tweed coat a scarlet jersey frock. And on through many examples.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $5 for each child saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Jen, The Tribune, Chicago.

Jimmy and Sherwood quarreled and Jimmy gave his playmate a couple of hard punches. Grandmother [illegible] the noise and came out to [illegible] combatants.

"Never mind," she said, "[illegible] and forgive."

Sherwood looked dubious. "All right," he said, "but just let that guy come near me and I'm going to remember." R. L. J.

Governor Lauds Deeds at Tablet Unveiling.

The memory of Casimir Pulaski, Polish patriot, was honored in Chicago and throughout the country yesterday.

On the battlefield at Savannah, Ga., 150 years ago, Pulaski, a brigadier general in the American army, gave his life for the colonies after having rendered them high service. Known throughout Europe as one of the foremost military commanders, he came to this country in 1777 volunteering his service. He was made first chief of cavalry by Washington.

In schools, public and parochial, in civic organizations, in patriotic bodies, the Polish patriot was lauded yesterday as his life and service to America were reviewed. One of the largest ceremonies was at the federal building where the balconies and main floor of the rotunda were packed with participants. There, following a program in which public officials talked, a bronze tablet was unveiled to Pulaski's memory, the gift of Americans who served in the world war.

Emmerson Is Speaker.

Gov. Emmerson, who made the principal address, declared that the story of Pulaski's glorious deed should be impressed upon the school children, particularly in relation to its bearing on life and liberty.

"This gathering not only honors the memory of this hero, but also that of our ancestors who built a country for our enjoyment," the governor said. "America is still the land of hope to the oppressed of all nations."

Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commandant of the sixth corps area, declared that the Polish hero had made a great contribution to the spirit of America, a "contribution which it is our honor and great advantage to remember constantly and to value properly."

Others who spoke were Col. Noble Brandon Judah, who presided; Dr. Alexander Szczepanski, consul general of the Polish republic in Chicago, and Capt. Anthony Czarnecki, United States collector of customs, who accepted the tablet in behalf of the government.

Service at County Building.

Another ceremony was Cook county's official observance held in the county building. State's Attorney Swanson in praising the life of Pulaski called attention to the ready loyalty of the Polish people in America to the United States government from the revolution to the world war. Other speakers were Anton J. Cermak and Judge Harry M. Fisher.

"No longer do we need to fear foreign invasion tearing down the ideals of liberty and freedom which we enjoy in America," asserted Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, speaking before the Iroquois club's luncheon honoring Pulaski. "But we do face the destruction of that hard won liberty through crooked politics, fraud, and corruption that we are complacently allowing to undermine our country."

and made the principal address. Mr. Prebis is vice chairman of the Pulaski national committee.

Mr. Prebis made a plea for more constant attention in America to the ideals of foreign revolutionary heroes, including Pulaski, Von Steuben, and Lafayette.

"If we in this country would reach out more often and bring to the front the achievements of these men we would improve our own citizenship," he said. "On every occasion we should strive to inculcate their ideals in the schools and by public gestures such as displaying the national colors on their anniversaries."

Many Chicagoans Present.

At noon President Hoover received the members of the official Polish governmental delegation sent here for the Pulaski celebration. Messages were exchanged between the president and President Moscicki of Poland for the occasion.

CAPITAL PAYS TRIBUTE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—[Special].—With a notable gathering present, representatives of two nations united today in paying tribute to the memory of Gen. IDENTIFY ALL BUT 24 OF 86 YANKS FOUND IN RUSSIA

LENINGRAD, Russia, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Banked along the stone quay of the placid Neva river, opposite the grim fortress of Sts. Peter and Paul, awaiting transportation to their native soil, Michigan, are the bodies of twenty-four unidentified American soldiers who died of wounds or disease in the Archangel campaign of 1918-'19.

In their unadorned metallic coffins these nameless soldier dead form part of the eighty-six American doughboys whose bodies have just been retrieved from their bleak resting places in the frozen north by the joint efforts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Polar Bear association.

Relatives of these anonymous heroes, who are called "Detroit's own," will be given an opportunity to do homage to the memory of the 24 unidentified at a great funeral in Detroit to be held next May.

Of the 86 bodies recovered in scattered sectors of the Archangel front and brought to Leningrad, 62 have been definitely identified by members of the American graves commission. Twenty-four of these were found in a local cemetery in the port of Archangel.

The bodies of 13 soldiers, all from Company A, were recovered from the Shenkhurst district of the Dvina river.

SERIES FANS TIE UP TRAFFIC IN PHILADELPHIA

BIG TEN GRID SEASON OPENS WITH 4 GAMES TODAY

NORTHWESTERN TEAM CLASHES WITH WISCONSIN

Michigan Huskies Invade Purdue.

The fruit of three weeks of planning and drudgery will be put to the vital test today in the four opening games of the Big Ten title race.

The Wisconsin-Northwestern and Michigan-Purdue games overshadow the struggles between Ohio State and Iowa and Indiana and Chicago, largely because the principals in the former pair of contests are considered the leading threats for the title.

Northwestern, although hampered by injuries and ineligibility, is considerably stronger than last season and is more than hopeful of ruining Wisconsin's championship chances. Coach Hanley has developed a fine backfield, but will know by tonight just how effective his rather inexperienced line is. The Wildcats will be after their first victory over Wisconsin in the history of their football competition. Wisconsin flashed its power last week in producing a last period punch which netted a 13 to 6 victory over the strong Colgate team.

Purdue Relies on Backs.

Michigan has a veteran team, with strong reserves, but Purdue is equipped with one of the ablest backfields in the Big Ten and followers of the Old Gold and Black believe that the running of Ralph Welch and the passing of Glen Harmeson will serve to upset the Wolverines. Purdue will be after its second decision over a Michigan team in Big Ten play.

From Baltimore, where the Rambler of Notre Dame undertake to repeat their victory of last year over the Navy, to Seattle, where the strong University of Southern California machine meets the huskies of Washington, the fans should find plenty to shout about.

Sharing major intersectional interest with the Navy-Notre Dame game are the Yale-Georgia game at Athens, Ga.; the resumption of Syracuse-Nebraska rivalry at Syracuse, and the Vanderbilt-Minnesota battle at Minneapolis. Other promising intersectional games are Colgate and Michigan State, Georgetown-St. Louis, and Penn-Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Trojans Meet Huskies.

On the Pacific coast Howard Jones' Southern California steam roller is favored against the University of Washington huskies. Of the three other conference games that between California's Golden Bears and Washington State at Berkeley stands out as the invaders from the north threw a scare into the Berkeley boys last year before losing by a count of 13 to 3.

The Georgia-Yale encounter overshadows even the conference games in the southern sector, but the Tennessee-Mississippi game at Knoxville will command a big share of interest below the Mason-Dixon line.

Harvard will devote today to polishing up its attack against facing New Hampshire. Princeton having made a slow and unimpressive start, expects plenty of trouble with Brown.

CUBS APPROACH STRIKEOUT MARK

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—The Cubs, despite their victory today over the Athletics, are flirting with the world series strikeout record. Ten strikeouts by Earnshaw today lifted the total to thirty-six, which is only eight from the record.

HERE'S CHANCE AT LAST! PICK A CUB HERO

BY DON MAXWELL.

Imagine yourself in the stands at Shibe park. The Cubs have been to bat in three innings and failed to score even though Hack Wilson as the first man up in the second inning tripled. The Cubs are the under dog. The Athletics are cocky, cheerful, confident. Guy Bush has seen the mighty Hornsby strike out in the first inning. It hasn't given him any cheer to see Cuyler, Stephenson and Grimm fold up in the second, allowing Wilson figuratively to die on third.

And now in the third inning Bush finds himself in serious trouble. The inning started happily enough when Max Bishop popped to Grimm, but Mule Haas, who had singled in the first inning, repeats with a one base hit to right. Bush tightens up. Mickey Cochrane, head of the real murderers' row, comes to bat. Ball one. Strike one. On the next throw, Mickey, the greatest catcher in baseball today, drives the ball whistling over second base. Two men on, one out, and Simmons and Foxx, home run hitters, dangerous hitters, coming up to bat.

Guy hitches up his trousers, pulls on cap and pitches. Ball, one, wide. Ball, two, low. Ball, three, high and inside. McCarthy motions to Blake to warm up more strenuously. Bush dusts his hand with resin. What's he thinking?

"Am I going to fail?"

"Shall I put this one over?"

He does. It's strike one, ball three. Bush takes the ball from Taylor's hands, walks back to the mound, turns and hurls right at the heart of the plate. Simmons hits a high fly. McMillan yells, "I got it," charges over to the pitcher's box, makes the catch. Two out.

Dangerous Jimmy Foxx up. Jimmy swings at the first throw and misses. Ball one. Then Foxx bangs a terrific grounder at English. If Woody comes up with it, the Cubs have their third out. Bush is saved. Fate is unkind to the youthful Cub shortstop. The chance is hard, he still is overanxious. A fumble and the bases are full. How would you feel were you in Bush's place?

Could you keep your nerve? Or would you throw down your glove in disgust?

And that's were Guy Bush showed his courage.

Bing Miller up. Bing swings at the

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—Capt. Charley Grimm, greatly depressed when he left Chicago, came away without his banjo. He didn't feel that he ever could play another note.

But tonight—ah! how different! Charley is playing every tune in the book on a rented instrument. He is playing as he never played before. Sweet and loud beyond description. The minute Charley made the final putout of the game a committee was appointed to get Charley an instrument. Word was sent him at the clubhouse that the musical contraption would be at his hotel when he got there. And it was.

It took only a $50 deposit and a mere $5 rental fee to obtain the thing—most insignificant amounts when you consider what a season of opera costs. Charley's personal banjo cost $450, but he didn't even notice the one he has tonight is a cheaper one.

Guy Bush was the center of the demonstration, not only because of his return to form after weeks of great suffering but because it was his antics at the plate at the start of the sixth that angered Earnshaw and started the rally that resulted in defeat. Bush is one of the joke batsmen of baseball and the flippancy of the young man while facing Earnshaw struck the big Athletic star as the height of impertinence. The result was a walk. And the result of the walk was a very noticeable panic among the A's.

Cuyler got a big hand, too, in the clubhouse demonstration. All the players feel that his deciding hit today will turn him right around and that he will be himself the rest of the series.

The same feeling existed in regard to Hornsby although his disposition is different from Cuyler's. Calm as he is, though, Rog's persistent striking out obviously was very much on his nerves today. He'll probably profit by the turn of events just as much as any one.

1. The victory showed the American league that its representative can lose a game in a world series.

2. By winning instead of losing the Cubs have to win only one game to even the series whereas they would have to take three straight to prolong the series had they lost today.

3. They have two chances to carry the series back to Chicago.

4. Bush, the big problem in the preseries dope, came through.

5. Root can pitch two more games in the series if it switches back to Chicago.

6. Malone and Blake, as well as Root, believe they have discovered how to pitch to Simmons and Foxx, both of whom batted .000 against Bush today.

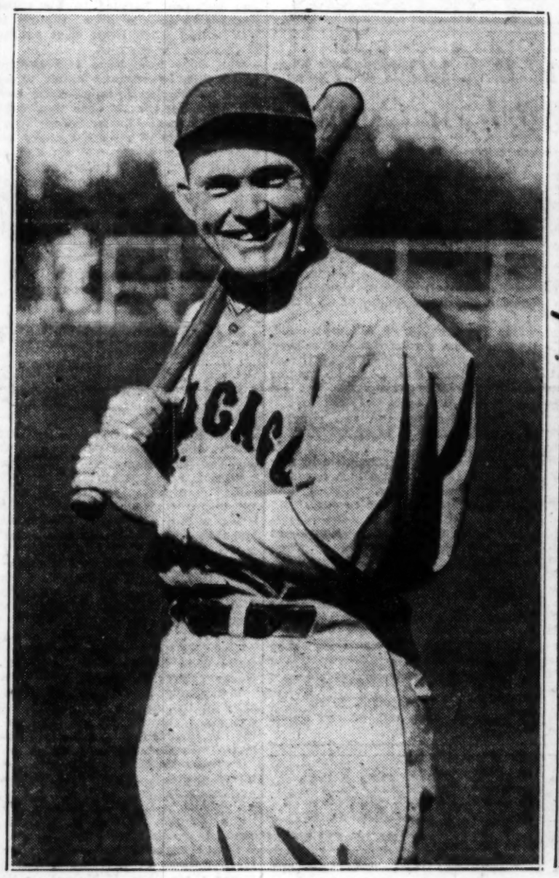
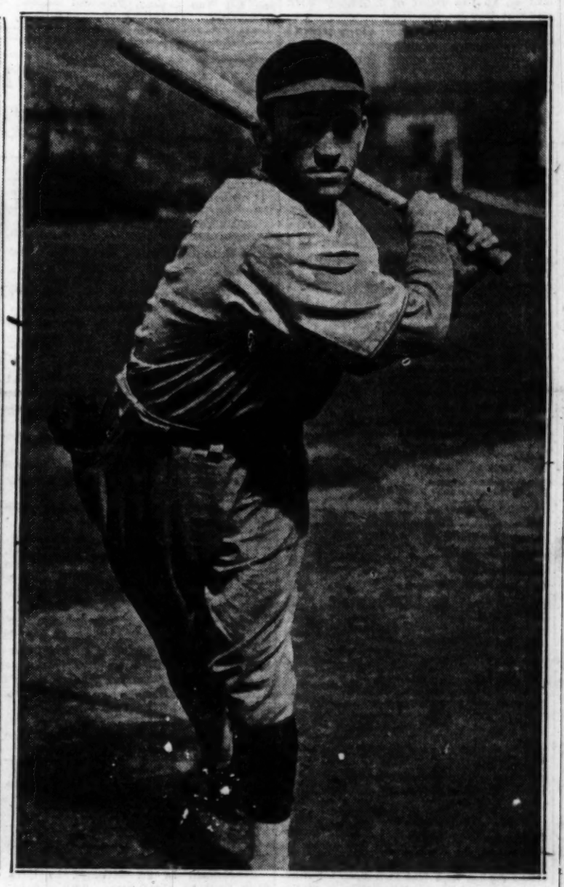
9. Hack Wilson still is going strong. He's leading the Cub's in hitting—and has been fighting like a wildcat since the series started.

10. Stevie swooped a beautiful double in the ninth which was taken as an omen that he'll be in on the doings if murderer's row breaks loose tomorrow.

CUBS' GOATS BECOME CUBS' HEROES





The series goats stepped out of character yesterday to drive in the three runs which gave Chicago its first victory over the Athletics. Rogers Hornsby (left) singled, scoring Bush with the run which tied the score in the sixth inning. Then Kiki Cuyler, after Wilson had grounded out, also singled, sending English and Hornsby home with the winning runs. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Ki and Rajah Awake from Strikeout Nap

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—It was a case of two lions parading in goats' clothing, then discovering their noxious raiment in the nick of time. For the first 23 innings of the world series Rogers Hornsby and Kiki Cuyler were the goatiest goats that ever amazed the baseball world with unexpected inefficiency. But in the 24th inning of the series—the sixth inning of today's game—they did their stuff superbly, enabling Guy Bush to win the first National league world series victory in three years and one day.

The Rajah batted in the tying run and Kiki batted in the other two of the Cubs' winning total of three.

Despite the performance of the two awakened sluggers, it must be said that without Jimmy Dykes they still would be herded with the goats. But there's no use harping on Dykes' error that paved the way to victory. The Cubs have been waiting since the start of the series to get a break, and nary a one had they got until Jimmy juggled English's high bounder with one out in the sixth, thus furnishing the first heartening circumstance for the Cubs since the big show opened in Chicago last Tuesday.

Let's Ponder on This.

In the first game Hornsby struck out with men on third and second in the third inning. He came up again

Guy Bush, the Cubs' star who slumped during the last weeks of the league campaign, pitched the first Chicago victory in the world series. He held the A's to nine hits and was master in the tight spots. In addition he drew a walk to start the winning rally.

McCarthy Criticized; Held Hack on 3d After Deep Hit

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Manager Joe McCarthy of the Cubs came in for a lot of criticism on his handling of Wilson after the latter's triple in the second inning of today's world series game. He held Hack on third on Cuyler's grounder to deep short, then sent him in when Bishop was playing in on the grass to get Stephenson's grounder. Hack was but by five feet.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—The state of affairs in the world series changed abruptly this afternoon. The Athletics lost, 3 to 1, in the presence of a scant crowd; the traffic arrangement broke down as on the great occasion of the Tunney-Dempsey prize fight in the sesquicentennial stadium and, to put one and all in a holiday mood, the mechanical voice of the huge broadcasting funnels in center field interrupted proceedings twice to demand silence and bawl the news of death in the family to customers sitting somewhere in the park.

In the sixth inning there was a message for Miss Ella Jessie Harvey. Her mother had died this morning and would she come home at once? In the eighth the management of the baseball firm tactfully intimated to J. E. Gilman that his father was dying, and would he, too, come home with all haste?

All in all, a certain cheery note was absent from the occasion and the 29,000 customers, a crowd marked down from the anticipations of 35,000, watched the boys play ball in melancholy silence. Of course, there were occasional yelps and there was always that murmur that a crowd sets up by its very breathing, but the principal note of the afternoon was the chirping of the telegraph instruments in the congested press coop, like insects chafing their legs together on a still night in the suburbs.

More Grumbling Among Press.

Here, too, there was grumbling and discontent, for the literary junk dealers had brought in an unprecedented number of vicarious authors, each one attended by his amanuensis, and the section was so crowded with ball players chewing pencils that some of the journeymen writers were shoved into aisles, complaining bitterly as they pecked at their typewriters balanced on their kneecaps.

It was not until the end of the ball game, however, that the customers experienced the full genius of the Philadelphia police in fouling traffic in any gathering of more than 500 people. The exit from the ball park was a twenty minute struggle through packed turns and alleyways and down winding stairs, with the throng pressing impatiently from behind and squashing those in front, and when the disheveled patrons finally reached the street it was only to find that no omnibus, taxicab or private motor was permitted within accessible distance of the park and that the only rolling transportation was the Philadelphia surface cars which stood fast, end to end, unable to get along.

So the customers walked, some of them for miles, past the lines of packed street cars, congesting the sidewalks and taking to the streets until eventually the crowd thinned out and they were able to get aboard things on wheels.

Equals 1926 Dempsey Fight.

Philadelphia is a city unlike any other on the American continent in this respect. Dump a convention of 500 bathtub salesmen here and the machinery of the town strikes a dead center and refuses to budge, but I had not thought it possible to duplicate the stupendous muddling and incompetency that the constables achieved on that marvelous night when Tunney licked Dempsey and most of the throng walked miles back to town in the rain.

Just how it happened that the attendance fell so far short of the expectations in view of the enthusiasm which was said to exist here it is not possible to say definitely, but there are several possibilities. For one thing, among all sports promoters Philadelphia has always been known as a three dollar town, and Tex Rickard amazed the entire sport industry the time he not only priced his best seats at $55 but got the money.

The world series tickets were listed at $1, $5.50, and $6.60, but in order to buy the 3,000 bleacher seats priced at $1 it was necessary to spend many hours standing in line in the company of a queque of derelicts dredged up dock side who had been holding the advanced places in the hope of selling them. The forward members of this picturesque group had been asking as much as $30 apiece for their places, but considering the sane sense of values which prevails among the greatest number here, I doubt that any customer was willing to pay more

Perhaps the common citizens of Philadelphia haven't much money to spend for pleasure. The Stotesburys, Clothiers, Wanamakers, and Biddles seem quite well off, but the world series is not a society festival in this part of the country and this town may resemble its strange neighbor, Baltimore, where the rich get richer but the wages are low.

Across the street from the low right field wall of the ball park, the emergency bleachers which the frugal householders had built on the roofs of their homes at considerable cost, were all but empty as the ball game began, but prices fell after the second inning and bargain trade which had been holding off for a drop was admitted for quarters and half dollars and escorted through the parlors and up through the skylights for a remote view of the ball game. At that, they were beyond range of the grewsome voice at the broadcasting funnels, droning its tidings of tragedy, which was a certain advantage.

Pegler Expected Too Much.

I trust that I did not expect too much of the Philadelphia athletes and customers, but judging from the local papers, this was to have been a very gay afternoon over here and the players had given out special articles, alive with elan and confidence. Then the crowd fell short, the police went frantic, the management blurted those shocking telegrams to unfortunate individuals who might have been called down to the office and informed of their tragedies privately and the home town players took on a licked and lifeless demeanor.

Joe's Mother, Bundled Up, Sees Cubs Win

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—One of the most enthusiastic rooters for Chicago was Mrs. Susan McCarthy 70, mother of Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Cubs. Bundled in blankets, Mrs. McCarthy cheered lustily from her box when the Cubs took the lead in the sixth inning. "Don't worry about my cold, and don't worry about my rheumatism," Mrs. McCarthy told her son before the game. "But be sure you make plenty of runs today. I like to see the runs come in. The Athletics beat you in Chicago, now you must beat them."

The Cubs' victory also brought great joy to another feminine fan. She was Mrs. Guy Bush, wife of the victorious Cub pitcher. "I'm so happy," Mrs. Bush said, "that it's hard to describe. This is the first time that Guy has pitched in a world's series and since he won the game, I can't start to tell you how I feel about it. All I can say is that this is one of the happiest days in my life."

A. J. Norwood came all the way from San Antonio, Tex., to see the game, but like many others who had paid speculators from $20 to $50 for a single ticket, he was disappointed. Agents of the department of justice had forced the speculators to stamp resale price on the tickets they sold and gate tenders at Shibe park refused to admit holders of tickets so stamped.

Uncle Wilbert Robinson was fretting in the lobby of the Ben Franklin at high noon. "I made the mistake of promising Babe Herman I would wait for him with his ticket," moaned Robby. "And Babe probably thinks the game starts at 3:30."

Three of Woody English's first four errors in the series were made behind Bush's pitching. The one in the third was the most terrible of the lot.

The fans were cordial to Guy Bush until he personally scored the first Cub run and the one that tied the score. After that they were decidedly hostile.

EDDIE COLLINS TO STAY WITH CONNIE MACK

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Instead of becoming the new manager of the Yankees, as predicted by many baseball men, Eddie Collins today declared that he is satisfied to remain with the Athletics as a coach.

It is known that Connie Mack has had several talks with Collins lately, and it is thought the former king of second basemen has been persuaded to give up the idea of going to New York.

Mickey Cochrane Nears Series Mark with 40 Putouts

By making 40 putouts in the first three games of the current world series, Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane, crack A.'s catcher, is within 11 of equaling the world record of 51 putouts hung up by Muddy Ruel with the Washington Senators in the 1921 classic.

Cochrane was credited with 14 putouts in the first game against the Cubs on Tuesday, 13 by virtue of Ehmke's strikeouts. The other was by means of a pop fly. Tuesday 13 more putouts came by the strikeout route. The 14th was a pop fly.

Cochrane's putouts on Tuesday and Wednesday surpassed by two each day the world record for an individual series performance. Ira Thomas, old time Athletics' backstop, achieved the former mark of 12 on Oct. 14, 1911.

BUSH PITCHES CHICAGO'S FIRST SERIES VICTORY

Cubs Score Three in 6th to Beat Earnshaw.

National league since the closing fight in the 1926 struggle they are welcome to get it out of two things. One was that they outhit the Cubs. The other was that Earnshaw perpetuated the idea that this is a world's strikeout series.

Although beaten and in trouble in more than a few innings the ex-Swarthmore college athlete whiffed ten men. He nailed seven of these prior to the sixth, in which he apparently suffered a momentary loss of his curve. After this decisive round he hung up the three others, two on Bush.

There was a pudgy fellow named Hack Wilson who didn't subscribe to the idea that Earnshaw was tough. Hack had no doings in the attack that actually won, but he at least tried. He clipped off a triple with none dead, but they couldn't fetch him home. He singled later in between strikeouts by Hornsby and Cuyler. In the noisy sixth he was seated only because Bishop came up with a real play on a sharp grounder. In the eighth he walked after Hornsby had doubled.

Hack's trying to get even for those two strikeouts hung on him by Ehmke on opening day and he'll succeed if they give him time.

Bush Gets Simmons.

What seemed to be an apparent attempt on Earnshaw's part to equal or better Ehmke's thirteen strikeouts in the first game began in the initial inning. He fanned McMillan and Hornsby.

In the same round Bush showed he couldn't be upset by trouble. Haas singled to the right of Hornsby with one out but Bush hurled cautiously to Cochrane and got him on a fly to Stephenson in short left. Then Simmons reached for one of those outside curves and bounced it easily to English for a force play at second.

It was in the second round that Wilson's triple gave the crowd a hint that the Cubs weren't through for the year. He led off by driving the ball over Haas' head in center. It looked like a sure run, giving the Cubs a lead for the first time since the series started. Hack couldn't get home, however. Cuyler bounced to short and Hack was held at third, which was the logical move with only one out. Then Stephenson grounded to Bishop and Hack made a break for the plate but was an easy victim. He couldn't slide because Stevie's bat had dropped on the third base line and Hack wisely figured there was no need of inviting a costly injury. The round ended with Grimm fanning on a fast ball right through the middle.

Earnshaw Strikes Out.

If the truth were known Bush probably got his confidence out of what he did in the Macks' second. He fanned the dangerous Foxx on curves. Miller flied to Cuyler for the next out. Then Dykes lined a single that Stephenson picked up on the first bounce. Boley cracked a single to right. Dykes dashed to third and slid into the bag just as McMillan tried to grab Cuyler's throw. The ball was somewhere under Dykes and McMillan couldn't locate it, Boley meanwhile going to second. Dykes made an apparent attempt to roll the ball where nobody could get it, but Bush was there to pick it up.

JIMMY DYKES.

Then, with two strikes on Earnshaw, Dykes started to steal home and he could have made it, but Earnshaw let the pitch come over for the third strike and the run didn't count.

Nothing more exciting than a strike out for Bush occurred in the Cub third, but in the home half the Cub hurrler experienced his biggest annoyance. With one out Haas singled over Grimm's head. Cochrane hit straight back at Bush, who was off balance, and the ball rolled into center for a single. It looked painfully bad when Bush threw three straight balls to Simmons. Two of them were outside and in desperation he tried to get one over the middle, but it drove Simmons away from the plate.

English Misses Grounder.

Bush then got over a strike and shot a fast, low ball that Simmons went for. He popped it high to McMillan. Bush began to work on Foxx and finally made him hit an easy grounder to English, who committed an inexcusable fumble. This filled the bases. It didn't discourage Bush in the least. He whipped over two straight strikes on Miller, who didn't swing. Then Bush gave the hitter his weakness—a high ball inside. Miller nibbled and flied to Stephenson to end the session.

The fourth, so far as the Cubs were concerned, was a matter of three strikes for Hornsby and Cuyler, with Wilson's single to right sandwiched in. The home portion, however, was another matter of concern for Bush. After Dykes had flied to center, Boley singled over short. Earnshaw sacrificed on the first pitch. Bush walked Bishop, the weak sister of Mack's attack. Then he fast balled Haas until he made him swing and fly to Cuyler in right.

Big Sixth for Chicago.

The Cubs did nothing in their fifth attack except to die in order. Not the Macks. It was here that two hits produced their only run of the struggle. With a 3 and 2 count Cochrane bounced to deep short and English fielded perfectly, but Mickey beat the throw. Simmons missed his swing on the first pitch and then lined to center. Foxx rolled one of those outside curves along the base line and Bush threw him out easily. Then Miller, with a 1 and 1 count, singled to center, Cochrane scoring. Miller died stealing for the third out.

Now for the sixth that brought not only the National league but the champions back into the series picture. Bush, who loves to hit, wouldn't swing. Apparently this bothered Earnshaw. He made extra effort to get the ball over and couldn't, so Bush walked.

McMillan, in an attempt to bunt, flied foul to Cochrane. The outlook wasn't so bright. Unlucky English swung into Earnshaw's first pitch and it whistled to right but came down outside the foul line by inches. Then he bounced one to Dykes, who charged in but couldn't pick up the ball. Bush was on second and English on first with one out. The Cubs had claimed that if they could just bat the ball to somebody instead of striking out as they did in Chicago, they could make a break for themselves. This was the break. By striking out they couldn't prove Mack's infield was weak.

Then Hornsby returned. He took a called strike. Earnshaw apparently tried to break a curve over the outside on the next pitch, but it didn't break and the Rajah bounced it past Boley for a single, Bush dashing home to tie the score at one apiece and English halting at second. Earnshaw tried to make Hack bite on two outside balls and Hack spurned them. Then the Mack hurler tossed one Hack decided was a cripple and he whacked it, but Boley scooped it up in some way and threw out the runner. English went to third and Hornsby to second on the play.

It's Up to Kiki.

It was then Cuyler's turn to follow in the footsteps of Hornsby. Kiki fouled off several and looked at others. Finally the count became 3 and 2. The next was in the middle instead of the outside, where Earnshaw probably wanted to put it, and Cuyler bounced a single over the pitcher's head. English and Hornsby ran home. That was the ball game.

The amazing deeds of Bush after the Cubs winning spurt in the sixth have been mentioned. The Cubs, however, didn't let up on Earnshaw. Hornsby's double and the pass to Wilson with two gone in the eighth caused a disturbance until Cuyler fouled to Foxx close to the stand. Then in the ninth Stephenson walloped a high curve to the left field corner for a double. There was nobody out when this happened, but the next three men couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

first throw, misses, strike one. Bush, as cool as an Alexander, curves a second strike over a corner of the plate. On the next throw Miller hits a fly which Stephenson catches.

That was pitching, pitching that requires skill and courage. Pitching that is worth seeing, worth talking about.

The Cubs are trailing Philadelphia, 1 to 0. Wilson is the only Chicagoan who has hit Earnshaw. His two singles comprise the Cubs' total. It looks like a third victory for Philadelphia is in the offing.

But Guy Bush, irrepressible, undaunted, wins a walk. McMillan fouls to Cochrane. Gritty English, determined to do his best, despite those four costly fumbles, is safe on Dyke's fumble. Chicago has two men on, one man out. Hornsby is up.

What of it? He has struck out twice. He's been up before and failed when a hit meant a run. No use getting excited.

Maybe Hornsby was thinking: "Suppose, I'll fan again. Watch Earnshaw put everything he has on the ball. He may ease up for the other fellows, but he bears down on me."

But Hornsby is of different mold. He tries just as hard as he's been trying all along. He keeps his head. He keeps his nerve. And he singles the tying run over the plate.

Wilson advances the two runners when he grounds to Bishop.

Kiki Cuyler up.

But does he give up?

You know what he did. You heard the radio announcer shout when Cuyler singled and Hornsby came galloping in with the two runs that were to bring the Cubs their first victory—the two runs that may change the tide and finally win the championship for Chicago.

Hornsby and Cuyler—were they stars of the day?

TRIBUNE BOARD AT MILWAUKEE ON DOUBLE DUTY

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—THE TRIBUNE scoreboard here will do double service for the various fans tomorrow. The world series will be on from 12:30 o'clock until the end of the game. Immediately after the close of the baseball battle the Wisconsin-Northwestern football game will be put on.

Besides the scoreboard handling of the running story of the games there will be a radio broadcast of each game, the latter by W-G-N. THE TRIBUNE'S scoreboard is located in the heart of Milwaukee at the Wisconsin avenue bridge, and is visible for more than a block west on Wisconsin avenue and a block south along the Gimbel gallery facing the river.

ODDS TUMBLE TO 2 TO 1 AS CUBS RECOVER

The betting odds on the outcome of the world series tumbled yesterday after the Cubs trounced the Athletics 3 to 1.

Twenty-four hours earlier the Athletics had ruled as 8 to 1 favorites. Last night they were 2 to 1 with more Cub money around than at any time since the series opened.

With the Cub fans banking on Charley Root to face the Athletics tofourth game was at 11 to 10 with the Athletics again the favorite.

In the sixth and struck out for the second time. In the second game he struck out in the first inning with English on second and he came up again in the third inning and struck out for the fourth time in the series. Today he was called out on strikes and his next time he was called out on strikes, six strikeouts in ten times at bat. He had one single to recompense him for his trouble.

Cuyler's record was even worse, although his strike-out total also was an even half dozen, for he reached the peak by striking out three times in the second game. Today he tapped to Boley with Wilson on third in the second inning, and he was called out on strikes with Wilson on first in the fourth inning.

But all these things were forgotten by Chicago partisans when they cut loose those highly urgent singles in the sixth inning. And Ki's was particularly gratifying for he was in the hole with two strikes against him when he socked his single to center that drove in the second and third Cub runs.

Watch 'Em Today.

The demonstration went farther than thoughts of today's encounter. All Cub bugs now believe the two power house boys have lifted themselves out of their slumps and will be factors in evening up the series tomorrow. Hornsby showed immediate effects of the revival by doubling in the eighth and Cuyler looked a million per cent happier in his subsequent trip to the plate, though he was retired when Foxx went against the stands for his foul.

The Cubs now have two chances to do this, by winning either tomorrow's or Monday's game. They have felt all along that if once they could get a lead on the Athletics they would meet the fate of all other cocky ball players—they would fold up and die on their feet. Their theory in this regard was substantiated by what happened today. After the Cubs gained the lead the A's made only one hit in four innings, an infield single by Bishop in the seventh.

3 Hurlers Set Today to Pitch for McCarthy

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—With the Athletics now leading the world series, 2 games to 1, tomorrow's contest is regarded all important. The Cubs, by winning, will tie the series. By losing they will place the Athletics within one game of the title and they will then need three straight games.

Tonight Manager Joe McCarthy is debating his problem. Should he start Charlie Root, his ace and Cub hero of the first game? Undoubtedly McCarthy would say yes if he could be assured of victory. But suppose the crafty McGillicuddy, who twice in three days has crossed up the Cub leader, selects Lefty Grove?

Melancholy Mose stopped the Cub rally in the second game and struck out six hitters, three of them in a row. If Roof is defeated the Cub cause is virtually lost.

Perhaps McCarthy will go in for a bit of strategy. Art Nehf, who looked exceptionally good in the one inning he worked in the second game, might come through. At least Root could be ready to go to his relief.

Then there's Pat Malone. Pat pitched three innings of the second and has rested three days. If Malone or Nehf could win tomorrow, wouldn't the Cubs hold the winning hand with Root ready for Monday and Guy Bush coming back in the sixth game in Chicago?

The best guess is that McCarthy will name his pitcher—Root, Malone, or Nehf—after Mack selects his hurler.

ENGLEWOOD AND SCHURZ WIN CITY LEAGUE OPENERS

Englewood and Schurz were the victors in the opening City league games yesterday, the former defeating Bowen, 20 to 0, at White City, while the latter rallied in the last quarter to defeat Lane, 14 to 6, at Soldiers' field.

Coach Bob Koehler's Schurz eleven showed that it is to be reckoned with in the north section race by coming from behind after Lane had scored a touchdown in the first period. Harry Stinespring went over on an off tackle play and Les Sadowski intercepted a pass for the Schurz touchdowns.

Joe Ponzevic, who led Englewood's baseball team to a city title last spring, featured in his team's victory over Bowen, scoring one touchdown after a 30 yard run and tossing scoring passes to Laskan and Chancellor for the other two. Chancellor accounted for both points after touchdown. It was Englewood's second victory over Bowen in their eight years of football competition.

Northwestern-Wisconsin Game Today Attracts 35,000

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—While a chill October drizzle washed the purple colors of Northwestern and the cardinal of Wisconsin tonight, coaches of the two teams featured in tomorrow's Big Ten opener at Camp Randall led their charges into seclusion into nearby towns. Northwestern went to Portage, Wis., home of three Badger gridders, while the hide out of the Wisconsin varsity was unknown.

Ticket sales checked today warranted the prediction of a crowd of 35,000. The Wildcats will not be lacking in support. Fourteen special trains, each carrying 550 rooters, roll into town tomorrow morning. The rest of the delegation of 10,000 Northwestern supporters started filtering into Madison this afternoon.

Marvil Replaces Hutchinson.

An air of determination pervaded the rival camps. Coach Dick Hanley sent his eleven through a brief workout this morning. It appeared that Marvil will start at tackle in place of Hutchinson, ruled ineligible Monday, and Eylor will be at Baker's end.

With the Badgers it was different. Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite ordering a typical midweek drill that included scrimmage with the freshmen on both offense and defense. A ray of sunshine penetrated the Camp Randall fog with the announcement that Mickey Bach, capable Minneapolis blocking half back, will be able to play tomorrow in case he is needed. Bach, a transfer from Gustavus Adolphus college, was in a tangle over credits.

Coaches in Statements.

"We want to win this game because it will start us on the right foot for the Minnesota contest next week," Coach Hanley said. "Injuries have bothered us, but the boys are determined. Stories about Wisconsin fearing our pass attack make me laugh. We lost our pass attack when Walt Holmer graduated," Hanley concluded.

"We've been drilling on running plays," he said. "It's likely to be too wet for passes." He added that Wisconsin is in good shape and that Northwestern will be a better gang of mudders.

Thistlethwaite particularly is anxious to defeat the school he coached to a high place in the Big Ten during his five year tenure at Evanston ending in 1926.

The back fields were in perfect condition for tomorrow. It will be Bruder, Hanley, Calderwood, and Bergherm for the Wildcats against Behr, Pacetti, Gnabah, and either Lusby or Russ Rebholz of the Badgers.

Long Ranges Require 12 Gauge Guns

BY BOB BECKER.

Although the 12 gauge shotgun is the most popular gun for duck shooting in the central states, the lightweight gun enthusiast need have no hesitancy in breaking away from the 12 in favor of a 16 or 20 gauge if he is doing his duck shooting over decoys.

In the hands of a fair to good shot either the .16 or the .20 will serve nicely. When the hunter is required to do a lot of long range gunning there is nothing to equal a .12 gauge because the heavier pattern of the .12 gauge shell means more shot in the "circle" and hence a better chance for a kill.

When we were shooting on a duck pass in Saskatchewan in September we were up against a proposition which absolutely demanded a .12 gauge because we were reaching for them at all ranges from ten yards [a few 65 mile an hour ruddy ducks or bluebills low down on the water] up to distances that looked as if they were close to ten miles.

Most of the shots were long to one accustomed to fairly close work over decoys. Such gunning requires a heavy pattern, heavier than either the .20 or .16 can give. Using a 30 inch double birreled .12 gauge one could get clean kills with shots that ordinarily we would not attempt over decoys.

All of us were shooting 3¼ drams of powder and 1⅛ ounces of shot. It was impossible to get a 3 dram, 1 ounce load, .12 gauge, where we were hunting. The latter is our favorite for average work over decoys. In other words, for 20 to 35 yard shots.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Like David awaiting the onslaught of Goliath, Purdue's football warriors are awaiting the crushing power of Michigan's husky eleven in the opening of the western conference season at Ross-Ade stadium tomorrow. And, like David, they were expecting to strike back at their huskier opponents through the air and match speed against their foe's might.

The gap of 29 years since an Old Gold and Black eleven has battled the Wolverines, combined with the Dads' day celebration, has created more interest in Purdue's first Big Ten game than has been stirred up in years. Not a hotel room was to be had in Lafayette tonight, despite the fact the major part of the influx was expected tomorrow. Chances for a sellout were excellent, indicating more than 20,000 spectators.

Michigan Arrives, Drills.

Michigan's squad of 34 huskies, which Athletic Director Yost characterized as the "heaviest squad that ever represented Michigan on a football field," arrived this morning. They passed, kicked, and ran signals for an hour on the field in the afternoon and after that light workout Coach Kipke commented that every man was in excellent condition. Purdue also romped about for an hour and retired to the country club for the night.

The starting lineup picked by the coaches tonight indicate a startling inequality of displacement, for Michigan's line outweights the Boilermakers twelve pounds to the man. The lightest man in the Wolverine line weighs 184 and the average is 194, while the heaviest Purdue linesman is 189 and the lightest 167.

While Michigan's well balanced team ruled a heavy favorite in most fans' opinion, that feeling isn't true at Purdue. They believe the full strength of the Boilermaker back field, which will be in action for the first time this year, will more than match Michigan's beef. This despite the fact that Michigan has its own great football players, such as Truskowski and Gembis, plus an unusually high degree of average ability.

Welch, Harmeson Backs.

Pat Welch, weighing fifteen pounds lighter than last year, and said to be faster and shiftier because of the decrease in poundage, will team up with Glen Harmeson and two sophomores, probably Purvis and Yunevich. The line is the main worry of the Purdue followers, for it didn't do so well against the Kansas Aggies in last week's practice game, despite the presence of Red Sleight and the former full back, Eb Caraway, who has been shifted to end in an effort to bolster the forward wall.

Coach Phelan is not one of the sour faced species of coaches, but his wise cracks indicate almost as great a depth of despondency as the usual wails of injuries and other bear stories. He replied to one question about a rumor that he was going to start a second team with a sardonic grin, and the cynical reply, "I'm going to start my first, second and third teams together. They're the only eleven I've got."

Behind its powerful line, Michigan will have the same back field it has used in earlier games, with Simrall at quarter, Dahlem and Hudson at halves, and "Dynamite Joe" Gembis at full back.

Wolves May Change Lineup.

There are rumors, however, that there will be a change in Michigan's attack in that Capt. Truskowski at end will shift places with Hudson on offense, with Truskowski calling the signals. This also gives the Wolverines a further threat in that Truskowski is a first class passer.

That might be a hint that Michigan will meet passing with passing, should the Boilermakers' line prove stronger than expected, for Purdue is virtually certain to rely on the air attack almost as much as on Welch and Harmeson's ability to tote the ball. The combination of Harmeson to Caraway is working especially well.

HAWKEYES OPEN BIG TEN SEASON AT OHIO STATE

Columbus, O., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Iowa's football squad arrived in Columbus today to battle Ohio tomorrow. After a short limbering up practice this afternoon the Hawks retired to the Columbus Athletic club for the evening. No entertainment was allowed by Coach Ingwersen.

Both teams were confident of victory in their first Big Ten game of the season. Capt. Willis Glassgow recovered from recent injuries, will be in the starting lineup against the Bucks, but the powerful back field of the Iowans of last year will lack the terrific driving power of Mayes McClain, declared ineligible for western conference competition.

Ohio State Heavier.

Iowa will be outweighed by the Bucks. Ohio's line will average 196 3-7 pounds, while the Hawkeye forwards will average 187 2-7. Iowa's backfield will be heavier than Ohio's, with an average of 178¾ pounds to 174¼. The average weight of the teams will be: Ohio State, 188 4-11; Iowa, 184 2-11.

Sam Willaman is still undecided on the Ohio lineup. The arm injury sustained by Dick Larkins in practice for the Wittenberg game is still bothering the varsity tackle, and there is a possibility he will be replaced by Haubrich.

Bucks Drill on Passes.

The Buckeyes, who have not had any scrimmage this week except a half hour late Friday night, went through another signal drill on the new forward pass plays and were quartered in the Scioto Country club for the night.

De Paul Meets Teachers in Benefit Game

Three thousand children will occupy sections of the huge lake front stadium as guests of Building Commissioner Chris Paschen, George W. Dixon, and Lawrence A. Downs. Proceeds will go to St. Vincen's Orphanage and Maternity hospital.

Coach Eddie Anderson's team will enter the contest stronger than it was in the season's opener at Detroit university. Clair Byers, flashy half back, has recovered from a siege of sickness, and Bill Johnson, whose crippled shoulder kept him out of practice for ten days, is also back in shape.

LOYOLA ELEVEN PLAYS COE IN DEDICATION GAME

Loyola university will attempt to make the dedication of its new stadium a complete success this afternoon with a victory at the expense of Coe college. The Kohawks are expected to furnish the toughest competition, Coach Lamont's squad will face this season.

Coe has a well balanced line and a strong back field with such men as Burrows, Langlas, and Frisbee. The Ramblers probably will concentrate on a forward passing game with Capt. Corny Collins and Les Molloy the big guns of the aerial attack.

Ripon Grid Teams Play Cornell and St. John's

Ripon, Wis., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—Ripon will play two football games tomorrow. The Redmen varsity will entertain Cornell college of Iowa in a midwest conference game, while the Ripon yearlings invade St. John's Military academy.

Zuppke Puts Illini Through Final Paces

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—It is only a short ride to Purdue and Bob Zuppke was sorely tempted to run over tomorrow to see Michigan in action but he put the temptation behind him and will stick at home to observe the Illini against Bradley.

Bradley, one of the leading Little Nineteen teams, which has lost only five games in five years, including two to Illinois, is expected to provide interesting competition.

Bradley Scored Last Year.

Only two touchdowns were scored on Illinois last season, one by Indiana, and the other by Bradley.

Coach Robertson has lost some good men but has eight veterans in his squad which includes Robert Harter, 295 pounds, the heaviest player in the state.

The Illini seem to be in the best condition physically since the start of practice as Stan Bodman, tackle, is the only disability. Wietz and Walker, two veterans, who have been disabled for some time, will probably be withheld although they have practiced this week.

Zup to Watch Chattin.

One of Zuppke's purposes tomorrow is to watch Chattin at quarter back. Chattin, a sub pilot last season, is considered along with Irwin as one of the two varsity quarters.

Provided Bradley does not make the going too tough, Zuppke will use all the new material possible. Probable lineups:

NAVY'S LINEUP IS INTACT TODAY FOR NOTRE DAME

This afternoon a regiment of midshipmen occupied the stands and cheered the sailors, and this evening, headed by Hog Alley band, an unofficial musical company of midshipmen, the navy lads snake-danced through the five and a half miles of corridors in Bancroft hall. At the pep meeting in Smoke hall, Commander Jonas Ingram, Coach Bill Ingram, Lawrence Koepke, captain of the team, and others spoke.

This afternoon Navy's practice was secret, consisting of a further drill in the special plays. No change has been made in the lineup and it will be intact tomorrow. The Navy will rely upon Ends Crane and Byng at the start and Moret and Beans later to stop Elder and Carideo, the most feared Notre Dame back.

GRINNELL SQUAD ON WAY TO GAME AT MILWAUKEE

Grinnell, Ia., Oct. 11.—[Special.]—With the entire first string backfield crippled, Coach L. L. Watt and a squad of twenty-two Grinnell gridders now are en route to Milwaukee, where the Pioneers tomorrow play their fourth annual battle with Marquette university. Rain this week kept Grinnell from practicing to the extent desired. An aerial attack will be used against the Golden avalanche.

IMPROVEMENT IN U. S. TRADE IS CONSISTENT

Expansion at Peak, Survey Shows.

The Chicago and New York stock and curb exchanges, the Chicago Board of Trade and other principal commodity markets of the country, together with all banks, will be closed today—Columbus day.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Business and industry cannot be expected to set new peaks every month and every year. But they can maintain general and consistent progress, subject to variations. This is the view of THE TRIBUNE current survey, which covers conditions for the country as a whole and particularly the middle west.

"The expansion period of business, which has been running for a year and a half, has reached its peak," the survey finds. "Indications of a slowing down have been found in the decline in steel ingot output and the consequent decrease in forward commitments and also in the drop in automobile sales.

"While business in both industries will be good during the fall and their outputs during the year will set new high records, the rush of business which characterized the spring and summer will not be maintained into the fourth quarter of the year. Although building contracts have dropped again, the volume of contemplated contracts has gained sufficiently to give a more cheerful outlook for fall.

Gain in Employment.

"The volume of production and movement of goods and checks cashed has continued well above last year's levels. Car loadings in August were at the highest levels for the season ever recorded and bank debits reached new peaks in the Chicago district.

"The month also was marked by good gains in employment and pay rolls. The gain in Chicago was the seventh consecutive increase this year in employment. Pay roll disbursements were all substantially higher than last year. Savings deposits showed a seasonal decline.

"Department store sales were at a new peak for the season and trade was reported at higher levels than the preceding year. New motor car sales continued above other years but have shown seasonal declines. Building was definitely off and showed smaller totals than a year ago."

Concerning conditions in Chicago, the weekly summary of R. G. Dun & Co. says:

"Business and industry generally are in what might be termed a 'plateau period,' showing no substantial change in either direction from the satisfactory levels of the last few weeks. Both wholesale and retail sales are at 1928 seasonal levels or better with the larger dry goods and department store groups. Building continues at levels below last year, but bargain hunters have begun to appear in real estate."

Montgomery Ward Boosts Rate.

Montgomery Ward & Co., mail order and chain store concern, yesterday passed along prosperity to its stockholders. The directors increased the annual common stock dividend rate from $2.50 to $3 by declaring a quarterly payment of 75 cents.

"Our sales are increasing and we expect continued increase," President George B. Everitt said. "Gains in volume are coming from increased facilities presented by the new stores we have been opening and we expect to make the 300 million dollar sales mark already predicted without much difficulty."

The increase in the dividend rate follows an offering in July of rights to stockholders to purchase one additional share at $50 for each three shares held.

Competition among chains for trade has developed strongly and will continue, according to Merritt Lum, assistant general manager of Montgomery Ward's chain store division. He predicted chain store principle will spread into new fields and that tire and coal companies will be the next industries to establish nationwide status.

REPORTS OUTPUT OF ILL. CRUDE OIL, ELECTRIC POWER

The total production, 571,000 barrels, exceeded the July production by 12,000 barrels. For the eight months from January to August, 1929, the total production of crude petroleum for Illinois was 4,212,000 barrels as compared with 4,376,000 barrels for the same period in 1928.

The report also lists Illinois production of electric power for August, 1929, at 391,870,000 kilowatt hours, giving the state a ranking of fourth, with New York, California and Pennsylvania preceding. The production of electric power by public utility plants in Illinois for August showed a 3 per cent increase as compared with the same period last year.

E. I. Rogers New President of Peoria & Pekin Road

Directors of the Peoria and Pekin Union railroad yesterday elected E. I. Rogers president of the road to succeed V. V. Boatner, who resigned last week to assume the presidency of the Chicago and Great Western. Mr. Rogers for many years has been chief engineer of the P. & P. U. J. L. Beven is chairman of the board.

Service Costs Increase as U.S. Prospers

BY SCRUTATOR.

A certain amount of what looks like waste to persons trained in the old school of economics goes along with American prosperity. In fact, the people of the United States have apparently learned how to be efficient without being penurious.

The shirt comes back from the laundry wrapped in transparent paper and braced with two pieces of cardboard, one to hold the garment flat and another to keep the neck in shape. There has been no cry that this is a waste of our timber resources. On the other hand, there is a true story of a traffic manager who found that his company wrapped small packages on six sides before consigning them to the railroads in carload lots. By confining the wrapping paper to four sides of each cubical bundle he saved his firm more than his salary each year.

These cases illustrate the difference between high standards of living and pure waste. The wrapping of the shirt is the performance of a service that is worth the cost to the laundry's patron. The additional paper on the bundles for shipments did no one any good. It was a charge on the consumer. Possibly shirts could still be wrapped if the price of paper rose; those other bundles could not be economically covered the old way if paper were one-tenth as dear as it is.

Room for Improvement.

The expression of the rule might well be this: Give the consumer anything that he wants in the way of goods and services, but be sure there is no unjustified charge on him.

Even yet there is a great deal of room for improvement in wasteful methods of industry. It is not so bad as it was eight years ago. In that year Herbert Hoover appointed a committee of experts to study waste. They found that in six selected industries the average useless loss in material, labor, power and human effort amounted to 49 per cent as compared with the best known practices.

One prominent evil then was the multiplicity of shapes, styles and sizes in merchandise made by many firms. The variations in such seemingly simple articles as ax handles, paper tags, hammers and barrels were often merely whimsical.

The shapes and styles that sold readily returned a profit and carried the loss on the others, with the natural consequence that the sorts in demand were too costly.

The department of commerce inaugurated a study on such matters and at the end of 1928 it was reported that 13,096 firms had adopted simplified practices—in other words, had cut down or eliminated their production of the little wanted goods. Promoters of the standardization movement insist that they have no desire to stop manufacture of anything that has real utility; their aim is to rid the buying public of those which have no reason for being other than the habit of having them produced. Mr. Hoover estimated that the movement had saved 600 million dollars a few years after it was started.

Cities Useless Waste.

A large and useless waste was caused by claims filed against the railroads. In 1920 their payments for damage or loss on freight shipments were somewhat near 140 millions. Last year this was reduced, according to the government figures, to less than thirty-seven millions. Especially the losses due to delay and theft were brought down.

The railroads rightly have pointed with pride to their part in this record. But there are those who believe they have been greatly aided by shippers. One of these is C. Fred Yegge, president of the General Box company.

"The box industry," he states, "through improvement in containers, has saved the public millions each year. With the coöperation of the forestry service, machinery has been found to simulate the bumps and knocks suffered in transportation. We use this research to build the best and safest and most economical boxes."

So it seems that all business is striving to save, but only where it it will not deprive the consumer of the slightest satisfaction.

Chicago Stock, Grain Men to Meet Monday

A step toward clearing up the controversy between the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Stock Exchange over the entrance of the grain mart in the stock market field is expected to be taken by the directors of the Board of Trade at a special meeting Monday afternoon, it was learned yesterday.

The directors of the Board of Trade have sent out invitations to its members who are also members of the Stock Exchange asking that a partner be dispatched to the meeting who is qualified to represent the firm. This is the first time that the seventy odd members who hold seats on both exchanges have been asked in a body to the deliberations of the Board of Trade directors on the subject.

Expect New Proposal.

Although officials of the Board of Trade refused to reveal the purpose of the meeting, it was understood that the firms holding dual seats will be polled on just what action they want the directors to take on the difficulties. The talk in the brokerage houses doing most of their business on the Stock Exchange was that a proposal to agree with the Stock Exchange not to list each other's stocks would be made. Grain traders put forth the guess that the meeting might end in the directors asking the holders of dual memberships to choose between the two exchanges.

In the meantime, the financial district awaited the return to Chicago of Adolph Kempner, president of the Chicago Curb Exchange association. Mr. Kempner is scheduled to meet with R. Arthur Wood, president of the Stock Exchange, on Tuesday to take up the proposal of interlocking members on the board of governors and on the listing committees of both exchanges.

Members of both exchanges expect that, with favorable action being taken, a merger of the two as the next step in about a year or so would be a logical move.

Seeks Coöperation.

It was explained by interests close to Mr. Kempner that long before the difficulties between the Stock Exchange and the Board of Trade reached an acute stage he has entertained the idea of closer coöperation between Chicago's two stock exchanges, the Chicago exchange acting as a primary market and the curb as the proving ground.

When the battle between the Board of Trade and the Stock Exchange flared into reworks Mr. Kempner retired to the sidelines, not wishing either side to feel that his organization was interfering. Now that peace between the Board of Trade and the Stock Exchange seems at hand he is to take up his original project, it was stated.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET ISSUES SHOW FIRMNESS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 11.—Moderate firmness was evidenced by stocks on the curb exchange today despite attempts to unsettle the market after a strong first hour.

Certain issues were offered in light volume, notably the ones that had "come back too sharply" following the break of last week. But traders, generally, impressed by the action of the market in the last two sessions and by the drop in brokers' loans yesterday for the first time in eight weeks, were reluctant to give up positions assumed early this week. The result was that first hour advances in favorites were not entirely wiped out.

A few of the features today were Cities Service, which made a daily new high, favorably influenced by news of rights to be issued to stockholders; Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, which gained 6⅛ points in anticipation of merger news; Electric Bond and Share, and Marine Midland, which displayed a much improved undertone; National Rubber Machinery, and a few others. Interstate Equities was in good demand among investment company shares. Oils were steady and little changed.

BUYING ORDERS BOOST CHICAGO STOCK PRICES

Auburn Auto Soars 25 Points.

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

The inertia which permeated the Chicago stock market during most of this week disappeared yesterday as a flock of buying orders briskly put prices up from one to 25 points.

Expectations of overwhelming sales of the new Cord front wheel drive car during the last quarter of this year brought a jump of 25 points to Auburn Automobile. Cord corporation, a large holder of Auburn stock, advanced a point.

Noblitt-Sparks reflected a good earnings statement with a rise of 2¾ points. Allied Motor Industries moved up 2½ points in reflection of the announcement of rights.

Leads Radio Group.

Grigsby-Grunow led the radio group in turnover with sales of around 17,600 shares. The stock was up a point in early dealings, but lost all the gain at the close. Zenith Radio was also active, and finished 1¼ higher.

Ken-Rad Tube closed fractionally higher after sales of more than 8,000 shares, the biggest turnover in this issue in some time. Reports were current that the company is about to announce a big increase in the sale of lighting globes and bulbs, being one of the five companies licensed to manufacture this article by the General Electric company. Earnings for the first seven months, it was stated, are running about 80 per cent ahead of last year.

Cities Service closed at a new high of 66½, a net gain of ⅞, in reflection of the announcement of rights to purchase additional stock at $45 a share. Katz Drug sold up 3¾ and Lane Drug advanced 2½. The Studebaker Mail Order issues advanced a point each in expectation of increased earnings from holiday orders.

Lincoln Printing closed a point higher on the statement of Washington Flexner, president, that earnings for the first eight months of 1929 were in excess of the full year's dividend requirements on the preferred and common stocks and ran well ahead of those for last year. Sales for the first nine months were 20 per cent ahead of those for the same period of 1928, he added.

Triples Earnings.

Lindsay Light was up a minor fraction on issuance of the earnings statement for nine months ended Sept. 30 which shows net profit after all charges of $56,505 after charges and taxes, equivalent after preferred dividends to 67 cents a share on the common stock outstanding, against $31,354 or 21 cents a share a year ago.

Q. R. S.-DeVry closed unchanged. T. M. Pletcher, president, announced that shipments of the company's new musical toy trade named "Playasax" have averaged 2,500 a day since Oct. 1. Art Metal Works was up 1⅛ and Gleaner Combine Harvester declined two points on light trading.

The investment trust group was rather dull. Bankokentucky gained 1¼ and American Equities was up a point. Midland United eased a point and Central Illinois Securities and Insull Utility Investments moved within a fractional range.

Commonwealth-Edison led the utility division with a five point advance. Associated Telephone Utilities gained three points and Community Water Works was up 1¼.

Allis-Chalmers Gets Large Utility Orders

Allis-Chalmers company has received orders covering heavy power plant equipment for three utility companies, aggregating approximately $2,000,000, it was announced yesterday.

Rumors Link Two Banks in Merger Here

Rumors of a merger between the new Chicago Bank of Commerce, now being organized, and the Union Bank of Chicago were circulated in La Salle street yesterday. The reports could not be confirmed but were based largely on the fact that Vincent Bendix, a director of the Union bank, also will be a large stockholder in the new institution.

The Chicago Bank of Commerce will start off with $1,500,000 capital, $1,500,000 surplus, and $600,000 contingent fund, making a total capitalization of $5,100,000. It will occupy the banking quarters at Madison and Monroe streets formerly used by the Union Trust company before its recent merger with the First National group.

The Union Bank of Chicago has capital of $1,000,000, surplus and undivided profits of $1,420,000, reserves of $216,000 and deposits of $9,307,000.

At the annual meeting of the Ridgeway State bank, 3722 West Chicago avenue, Nelson K. Reese was elected chairman of the board, Harry A. Newberg, formerly vice president of West Madison State bank, was made president, and William F. Lawley, formerly manager of the real estate department of the West Madison State, a vice president.

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC INCOME RISES SHARPLY

New York, Oct. 11.—The income account for Central States Electric corporation for the twelve months ended Sept. 30 showed $22,739,087 available for the common stock after all charges. These earnings represent an increase of 261 per cent over those for the twelve months ended Sept. 30, 1928, and were equal to $3.08 a share on the average number of shares outstanding in the period.

Investments taken at the closing quotations on the New York stock exchange and the New York curb exchange were over $210,000,000 in excess of book cost Sept. 30. Total market value of securities was $340,000,000. In addition it owns valuable warrants to buy common stock of various companies at prices below the present market.

The corporation's largest single investment is in the common stock of the North American company, in which company it is the largest stockholder. Its holdings of over 850,000 shares amount to more than 15 per cent of the outstanding common stock of that company.

News and Gossip of Stock Markets

Bethlehem Looks Up.

Bethlehem Steel was favorably influenced by the appearance of unofficial estimates placing net for the third quarter at approximately the same as shown in the previous quarter when $18,69,082 was reported before charges. Such earnings would leave a balance equal to around $4.25 a share for the common stock, compared with $1.43 a share actually shown for the third quarter last year. On that basis net for the first nine months would approximate $12.50 a share, contrasted with $3.94 a share in the same period of 1928.

Stimulates Interest.

Reports from Berlin stating that negotiations between the Kreuger interests and the government looking toward the establishment of a match monopoly there, in return for a large loan, are nearing successful consummation, was primarily responsible for the sudden development of renewed interest in Kreuger & Toll securities here. The company is one which well might defies analysis, but is rated as one of the largest investment and general financing corporations in the world. It is the largest stockholder of Swedish Match monopolies in many countries in return for financial assistance, and usually acquires part or all of government loans obtained by the match company resulting from securing of concessions by it.

Money Market Puzzle.

Still puzzled by the current ease in money, Wall street is searching for a satisfactory explanation for this sudden relaxation at a time when the peak of fall demand is at hand. Some see it as the result, partially at least, of the recent substantial marking down of stock values for loan purposes by the banks. Many of the active high priced stocks, it is learned, are being taken into loans currently at only about half their prevailing open market prices. When the banks mark such values down the difference must either come out of the market price or be made up by larger margin requirements. In this instance, it is understood, demand for additional margins has been well met. This naturally tends to release additional bank funds and make a larger supply available to the call money market.

Holds Up Price.

What is said to be the best of buying continues to hold up the price of Standard Oil of New Jersey. With its huge surplus and its possibilities in the chemical field and also in natural gas, the company is looked on as the best in this group. Standard of Indiana and Standard of California are also commanding attention. Outside of the Standards, Royal Dutch is expected to show some big earnings this year.

Based on Expectations.

The buying in Continental Can is based on the expectation of a possible increase in the dividend rate after the merger is completed with Owen Illinois Bottle company. The latter pays $4 dividend while Continental has been paying only $2.50. Continental is earning $6 a share and with the merger of the two companies the savings on distribution are expected to bring much larger earnings to the combined companies.

Link Canada Dry, Coca Cola.

Canada Dry is expected to tie up with Coca Cola and therefore widen its distribution. Coca Cola has a big plant in the south in a territory that Canada Dry has hoped to invade.

PRICES IN LISTED BOND MARKET CONTINUE FIRM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Among the convertible issues, which have lately monopolized the spotlight in the bond market, chief interest attracted to the debut of the new Texas corporation convertible 4s which in initial trading on a when issued basis sold up to 101 and closed at 100½, three points above the offering price.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 11. — Stocks ran around in helter skelter fashion all day but failed to make much progress. Traders seemed anxious not to do anything that might bob up to disturb their peace of mind over the two day recess and buying and selling operations were both conducted with an eye on the old "safety first" slogan over the mantelpiece.

Although nearly all stocks were highest one time, most of them came in for a drubbing via the profit taking route, with the result that he score was about even when the 3 o'clock bell rang. Volume fell off to 4,000,000 shares.

Money Supply Abundant.

The news, like the trading, was about a 50-50 affair. Money was again in superabundant supply at the rate of 5 per cent and the speculative element, after cogitating over the matter overnight, made up its mind that the brokers' loan decline might be put down as a bull point. The general unwillingness to carry stocks over the holiday week-end, however, very largely offset these favorable conditions. Also there were those who had uneasy moments over the reflection that we usually have a weak market over Yom Kippur and this didn't help the "recovery" to any noticeable extent.

In spite of the irregularity observable nearly all day, the market was provided with the customary quota of sensational—or nearly so—features. American Tobacco was again the star performer of the day, selling up 16 or 17 points on active dealings, but falling back a third of the distance of its advance before the end.

Western Union was another high light of the trading, although the stock was less active than numerous others which gained less. Remington Rand surged forward to a new high price in the afternoon after a quiet morning and a strong forward movement in Kreuger & Toll and International Match.

Share Buoyant Market.

There were a number of fair sized declines, too. Atchison down 5 points, American Can 3¼, Eastman Kodak 8, and Detroit Edison 10, were some of them. Rails were moderately active and some of them managed to make progress.

A feature of the late trading was Fox Film, which had a run up to 101½, a gain of nearly 4 points. The company had big advertisements in the newspapers telling of a special announcement to be made in all of its theaters tomorrow and the belief in the street was that new stock was to be issued on a favorable basis and that the funds were to be used in some merger deal.

Steel stocks were in favor during the forenoon, but lagged in the afternoon. At that most of them managed to keep up appearances to the end of the session.

Coppers Irregular.

At intervals the coppers showed strength, but the going proved too strong for them and the close found the leaders in the mire. Both Anaconda and American Smelters were selling ex dividend today, so they could not properly be included in the stocks that were steady.

Oils were all mixed up. The ad-

WHEAT PRICES RALLY ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

Corn, Oats Close Steady; Rye Is Higher.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Evening up for the double holiday, as all American grain exchanges will be closed today, Columbus day, furnished the greater part of the business in wheat yesterday, with an early decline, followed by a strong rally with the close at net gains of ⅛@¼c.

There was persistent selling by commission houses and the local element early, but an oversold condition developed and offerings were rather light on the way up. Winnipeg was ¼c lower to ⅛c higher at the last with Buenos Aires, unchanged to ½c higher, February in the latter market being $1.25½.

Corn showed a heavy undertone, but rallied from the inside figures with wheat and closed unchanged to ¼c lower. Oats were unchanged to ¼c lower, while rye was ⅛@1c higher with March leading.

Export Demand Improving.

There was little change in the general wheat situation, and the trade gave scant consideration to the routine news, but the persistent buying of North American cash wheat is attracting attention from many operators who feel that Europe must start to take hold on a liberal scale before long, especially as about one-third of its annual requirements come from overseas. Pressure of native grain aboard is apparently letting up, as Jugo-Slavia wheat in Liverpool was quoted at 2d higher for the day. Export sales for the week are estimated at 500,000 to 600,000 bu, mainly Manitobas but included some hard winter and durums.

Liverpool wheat futures closed ¼@⅝d lower, ralling after an early break. Argentine continues to export on a liberal scale with clearances for the week aggregating 4,720,000 bu against 2,077,000 bu last year. North American exports of 5,568,000 bu compared with 6,438,000 bu last year. The trade looks for little change to be shown in the domestic visible supply on Monday.

Local Trade in Corn.

Greater part of the trade in corn was of a local character, with prices off around ¾c early to a new low on the present movement, but when shorts tried to cover they found offerings small, and a rally followed. Country offerings to arrive were generally held above buyers views, with purchases of 22,000 bu reported. Charters were for 240,000 bu to Buffalo. Buenos Aires finished ¼c lower.

Commission houses were on the buying side of oats, taking the offerings of locals on scale orders. Country offerings were small, and the spot basis little changed. Rye showed independent strength as the result of persistent commission house buying.

STOCK TRADERS CAUTIOUS; PRICE CHANGES SMALL

vances and declines of the group, however, were largely fractional and nobody seemed able to get very badly excited over any of them.

Among the specialities, Johns-Manville and May Department Stores continued to star, the former running up an additional net gain of some 6 points and the other going ahead for about four. The Johns-Manville surge boosted it to a new high for the move.

Instead of showing the expected firmness incident to the week end, the holiday tomorrow and the near approach of the midmonth settlements, call money was more abundant than ever. After the rate dropped to 5 per cent shortly after noon, so much money poured into the outside market for employment over the week-end that it was touch and go whether the official rate would have to come down to 4½ per cent. Call money has not been so low as 4½ per cent since August of last year.

WORLDS GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Grain traders were said to be well evened up at the close for the holiday. Most of the local operators were bearish on wheat and corn, but covered at the last, making the rally. For the present there is no dicided trend to grain values and they are kept within a narrow range in expectation of the federal farm board taking unexpected action that would cause a sharp change in prices. It is believed unless it or foreigners come to the relief of the wheat market in the near future, it will take good support to make and maintain a higher range of values.

Hard winter wheat is selling at low prices at the gulf. It was said that sales had been made to England at 4c under Chicago December. This is an extremely low figure and is for this month's loading.

Broomhall's latest on the Argentine wheat crop quoting a reliable authority who has been over the country is for reduction of 30 to 40 per cent in the acreage of Corboda and Santa Fé.

CHICAGO CURB EXCHANGE

Temple stocks were the outstanding performers in a bullish Chicago curb session yesterday. The A stock advanced three points and the B finished higher by nearly four in heavy trading.

Standard of Kansas fluctuated up to 32, but receded to 28 at the close for a fractional loss. Ludlow for the second consecutive day jumped four points, and Fox Theaters and General Parts turned in good gains. Transformer was in good demand at fractionally higher levels reflecting an announcement that the company's business for the year up to Oct. 10 is six times that of 1928.

Republic Portland Cement 6 per cent bonds sold initially at 95½, and Guenther Russell-Law common started off around 30.

One month ago	12.50@13.75
One year ago	12.75@13.50
Top yesterday, $13.75; average, $13.00.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today, 300 cattle, 6,000 hogs, and 4,000 sheep.

More orders swung to medium and weighty hogs yesterday and narrowed the price range again. The top and average show a spread of only 45c at $10.15 and $9.70, respectively, the narrowest since June 6.

Yesterday's meager supply of 1,000 cattle cleared slowly at the week's decline, consisting largely of common to medium quality at $10.50@13.00. The best available stopped at $15.25. Lambs were sorted closely on a 15@25c lower price basis, being the first setback the market has experienced in more than a week. Westerns brought a steady price, but carried better quality.

The acute scarcity of good to choice medium and heavy hogs brought the latter kinds to the extreme top price yesterday. Prime 210@270 lb averages reached the peak, with best light at the close selling at $10.00. Hogs averaging 225 lbs and under ruled weak to 15c lower, while stronger weights held firm at Thursday's quotations.

Buying Is Conservative.

The range of prices was as narrow as any corresponding day in several years. The top and average prices early last week were $1.10 apart. On the corresponding day in 1927 the two prices showed a spread of 80c and in 1926 were $1.35 apart. Larger houses bought conservatively, and 4,000 were left at the close, with 6,000 estimated for today.

Only a few scattered loads of steers were offered yesterday, and sold generally steady, but show losses of 25@50c since a week ago. Choice light steers and yearlings were absent, but were quoted 25@50c above the close of last week, on the strength of recent sales at $16.25@16.50.

Cows and heifers ruled strong to higher, closing 25@50c above the low spot early in the week. Calves were unchanged, but are fully $3.00 under the high spot two weeks ago, when $18.00 was paid freely for the $15.00 kinds on recent sessions. Stockers and feeders were fewer in number and comparatively slow at steady prices.

Following a top-heavy opening, native lambs were sorted closely at 15@25c decline, although a load of hand picked stock to a city butcher reached $13.75, equaling the highest of the week.

Bulk sold at $12.75@13.25, against $12.00@12.50 a week ago. Westerns cleared largely at $13.00@13.50. Aged sheep held firm, while yearlings weakened slightly. Brisk country demand held feeders firm at $12.00@13.00.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 300 cattle, 6,000 hogs, and 4,000 sheep, against 288 cattle, 6,564 hogs, and 5,703 sheep the previous Saturday and 429 cattle, 2,383 hogs, and 134 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated at 33,000 to 50,000. Col. J. Roberts marked 50,000, H. C. Carlson 48,000, E. E. Hubbard 46,000, G. M. Chandler 41,000, C. Southwick, H. Pattison, and A. G. Welhener 4,000, F. M. Sherwood, W. S. Nicholson, and R. W. Trotter 33,000, W. C. White and S. Lund 37,000, J. M. Waters 36,000, J. T. Brown 35,000, and F. Knutzen 33,000.

PACKERS SELL LARD

Packers yesterday were credited with selling lard futures to a fair extent and there was also considerable liquidation by longs who have become tired. Buying was not conspicuous, and with hogs lower on packing grades and Liverpool lard 3d to 9d lower there was no incentive to advance prices. The close was at net losses of 2¼c to 5c. Exports were 41,900 lbs.

Limited interest was taken in dry salted clear bellies, with the finish 5c to 10c lower, October leading the break. Exports of bacon were 51,500 lbs. Cash trade was quiet. Prices follow:

LOW FINISH FOR COTTON

Cotton values held fairly during the morning, but ran into selling late yesterday. This weakened the market, and closings were at the lowest. Hedging pressure made it easy for shorts to cover, and for trade interests to secure supplies on a break. A better tone to cables than expected was a factor in sustaining values for a time, but Liverpool closed 2 to 3 points net lower with the best spot business of the week, 10,000 bales.

Rain was reported in the Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma and in Arkansas and Tennessee, which will delay picking. It is said that there is little top crop in Oklahoma.

Garside estimates consumption for the month of September in the United States at 558,000 bales, against 558,000 bales in August, and 492,000 bales in September last year. Cloth trade was said to be fair.

Port receipts for the season to date aggregate 2,519,875 bales, against 2,468,091 bales last year. Exports for the season so far have been 1,879,440 bales, against 1,354,433 bales last year.

At the last futures in Chicago were 13 to 19 points lower. New York off 23 to 27 points, and New Orleans 18 to 19 points lower. Spots lost 20 points with New York middlings 18.55c and sales 1,002 bales. New Orleans, 18.20c; Galveston, 18.40c, and Houston, 18.30c. Prices follow:

From the estate of Helen Cohn, represented by Miller & Cohn, the firm rented the store at 1252-58 South Halsted street for twenty years, with the rental on a percentage basis. It is expected that the term will produce a rental of $1,000,000. The store at 2216 East 71st street has been leased from the 2216 East Seventy-first Street Building corporation for twenty years at a reported term rental of $240,000.

Noyes National Realty corporation, leased to the chain firm the premises at 7506-08 Cottage Grove for twenty years at a reported term rental of $330,000.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

The condition of the money market has not affected our ability to amply meet the requirements of Chicago home owners who might desire second mortgage loans.

Money rates have been high, and the charges against second mortgage loans are up. It may be that our rates are too low, but so long as we enjoy the favorable circumstances as we have in the past it has not been found necessary to raise them.

We charge interest not in excess of 6% % and a commission of 3% % for a one year loan, 6% % for a two year loan and 9% for a three year loan. These commissions are applied regardless of whether the borrower chooses to liquidate his loan in instalments of 2% a month or more.

We believe that we offer to home owners of Chicago and suburbs not only a unique plan of second mortgage financing, but one which is saving them a tremendous amount of financing charge.
